NEW PROBE STARTED IN

Inter-State Commerce Commission to Go Into Express Business

INVESTIGATION TO BE SWEEPING

Inquiry Instituted at Instance of Commercial Bodies of Country.

Washington, July 1.—A sweeping investigation of all the express companies in the United States affected by the interstate commerce laws today was ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission on its own motion.

Evidently in anticipation of this action by the commission, practically all of the express companies with the exception of the Long Island, late yesterday afternoon filed new tariffs which are believed to be materially reduced in rates. It was said today that it would require several months to compare these rates with those now in existence.

It also was announced that the filing of the new rates would not affect the proposed investigation in any way.

Commercial Bodies Complained.

More than a year ago, a number of the leading commercial organizations of the country petitioned the commission for a general investigation into the methods of the express companies and in its order today the commission says that the inquiry is undertaken "to determine whether such class, classifications, regulations, practices or any of them are unjust or unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory or unduly preferential or prejudicial or otherwise in violation of the provisions of said act, and to determine the manner and method in which the business of said express companies and each of them is conducted."

The Defendant Carriers.

The following carriers are named as parties defendant in the proceeding:

Adams Express company, American Express company, Borough Express company, Boston and Worcester despatch, Canadian Express company, Canadian Northern Express company, Dart & Co. Express, Davenport and Mason's Express, Dodd and Childs Express company, Dunlap's Express company, Earl and Prew's Express, Globe Express company, Manhattan Delivery company, Morris European and American Express company, National Express company, New England Despatch company, New England Express company, New York and Boston Despatch Express company, Northern Express company, Pacific Express company, Southern Express company, U. S. Express company, Wells, Fargo and company, Westcott company, Western Express company, "and also the natural persons above named and each of them who are engaged in such express business under the above names."

Combination Rates.

The reduction in express rates filed yesterday are said to be important only insofar as they affect what are known technically as combination rates—that is, instances in which shipments are made by two companies to a final destination. Express combination rates long have been figured on a graduated scale of weights based on 100 pounds. If the rate on a ...ed pound package is one dollar, ...stance, by the Adams Express ...any to a junction point with the ...S. Express company and one dollar ...n that junction point to the ship...nt's destination, the combined rate ...ould be $2. By the terms of the proposed tariffs the combined rate would be $1.60—a reduction of 15 per cent.

No Cut in Straight Rates.

By reason of varying distances and varying weights of shipments the percentage of the reduction also varies between points of origin and points of destination, but the average reduction on combinations of graduated rates is approximately 17 per cent. So far the examiantion of the new tariffs filed with the commission disclosed no reduction in straight rates except in instances where manifest injustice apparently heretofore has been done.

The proposed tariffs which are to become effective on August 1, will be included in the inquiry instituted today by the commission. If the inquiry should show that the reductions are not, in the opinion of the commission, sufficient to meet the requirements of express commerce, they undoubtedly will be further reduced.

NEW MAIL WAGON IN USE.

Contractor Ayres Took Hold of Fort Wayne Work at Midnight.

Contractor Ayres, of Kendallville, who was awarded the work of transporting the mails between the postoffice and the depots in Fort Wayne, took charge of the work at midnight last night.

Mr. Ayres has a complete, new wagon equipment, including one two-horse outfit, made necessary by the heavier volume of mail now handled in Fort Wayne. Heretofore only single-horse wagons have been used.

NO TICKET, NO LAUNDRY.

Judge Huser's court will be the battleground for a peculiar case some time late this afternoon. William Wells, of this city, is going to sue John Lee, a local Chinese laundryman for $2.40 in payment for the laundry he alleges the Chinaman refused to return to him when he failed to produce his wash ticket. Lee demands a jury trial, and six citizens will be called upon to give judgment in the case.

BROADWAY IS TO BE CLOSED

Pennsylvania Company Wants to Begin Driving Piling July 12.

NEW ROUTES FOR THE STREET CARS

Calhoun Street to Be Thrown Open to the Public Tonight.

At a conference held yesterday afternoon between the board of public works and Superintendent Wardrop and Engineer Fred Graham, of the Pennsylvania company an agreement was reached by which the work of elevation at Broadway will be started on July 12.

Following this a meeting was held with the officials of the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company, and they consented to rearrange all the car lines affected so as to give the best service possible during the time the crossing will be closed to street car traffic.

The company will have to get its pile driving equipment together before the work is taken up and it began this task after the conference which was held so as to give the street car company ample time to figure out its changes. The street will be kept open all the time for pedestrians but wagon traffic will be discontinued until the piling is all in.

College Street to Be Opened.

College street will be open to all kinds of traffic during the work of elevation at Broadway and false work will be put in and a roadway made at Union street as soon as the Pennsylvania company can get its surface tracks raised. Fairfield avenue will also be open and these thoroughfares are expected to take care of the travel.

South Broadway car service will probably be taken care of by a short line from South Wayne avenue and Creighton and all interurbans will be routed around Creighton avenue and down Calhoun street, which will make some congestion that can not be avoided.

Calhoun Street is Opened.

Calhoun street is practically finished and while the street car company will use only one track for the present, both sides of the roadway will be open to wagons this evening and kept open for all time as there is nothing more to be done except overhead work, which can proceed without interrupting traffic, providing of course the agreement for extra trackage is ever entered into.

No estimate of the time that will be consumed at Broadway has been given by the board of works for the reason that so many obstacles not looked for were encountered at Calhoun street and delays resulted that indicate it is not safe to make any promises.

All Suits Dismissed.

It is understood that attorneys who have suit against the city for damages growing out of the elevation at Calhoun street will dismiss them in a few days as court decisions point to the fact that the city can not be held for damages to abutting property growing out of necessary street improvements.

There were thirteen of these actions filed after all of the owners had made demands for damages that aggregated several thousand dollars which was refused by the board of public works.

After a Contractor.

The long and unnecessary delay on North Calhoun street has prompted the board of public works to go after Contractor Menefee, who has the contract for paving.

At the time the board let the contract he was the lowest bidder but the members doubted his ability to handle the work and very reluctantly gave him the job. He finished the concrete work a week ago and has only about a carload of brick ready to put down.

A pretty sharp letter was written to him today in which he was asked to meet the board at once and let the members know what he intends to do.

NEXT CONVENTION HERE

Phi Delta Kappas Vote to Come to Fort Wayne.

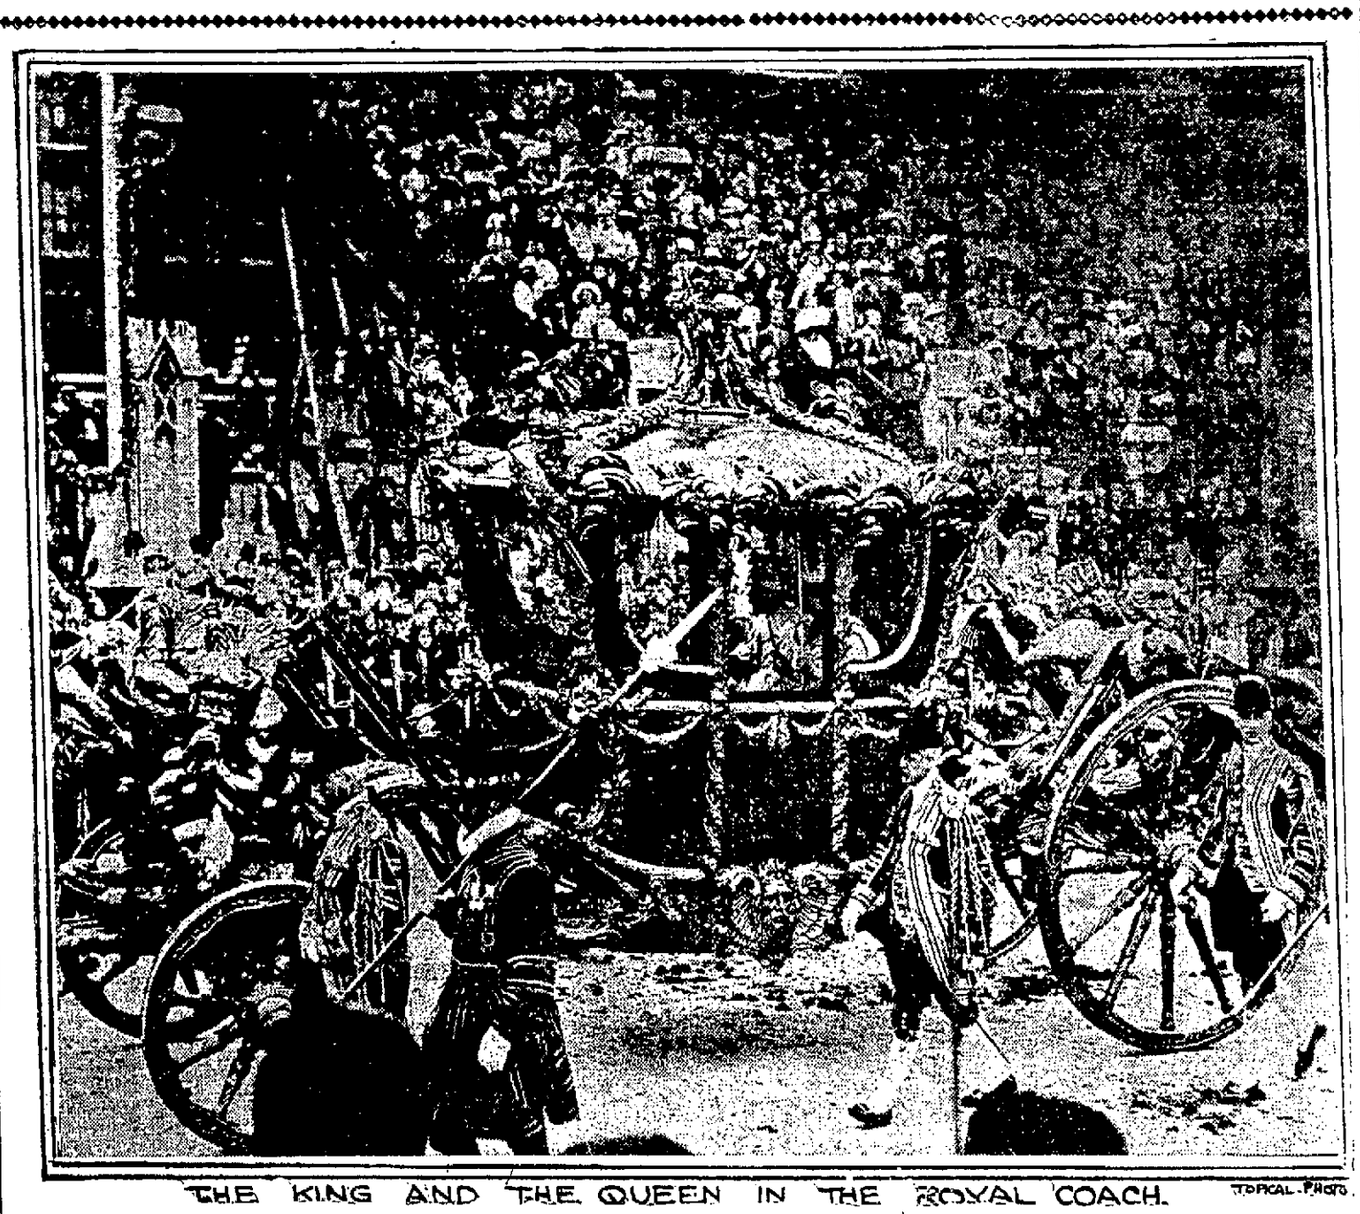

Fort Wayne delegates have returned from the state convention of the Phi Delta Kappa fraternity at Peru, where Wayne Monahan gave his successful competitor a close race for the office of president. Fort Wayne was selected as the next convention city, and the officers chosen were:

President, Rouhier Howard, Peru; vice president, Chester Clark, Garrett; secretary-treasurer, John F. Cauchat, Indianapolis; auditor, Edward Bishop, Muncie; sergeant-at-arms, William Feighner, Marion.

MR. FLETCHER BEATS RECORDS.

Harry Fletcher, of the Patterson-Fletcher Clothing company, wins all bets this season as a truck farmer. Sweet corn in most gardens is only about knee high, but yesterday Mr. Fletcher and his family enjoyed a roasting ears dinner, the corn coming from his own garden. This is quite a phenomenal record as sweet corn is not supposed to be ripe before the middle of July. Charles Whitmore, the gardener, of course, deserves the credit for the early crop.

LADY WITNESS IN LORIMER HEARING

Hines' Telephone Operator Remembers One Point Very Well.

THEN MEMORY FAILS

Washington, July 1.—Miss Frances Carroll, telephone operator in the office of the Edward Hines Lumber company, charges, and Fred Carney, of the Carney Lumber company, Marinette, Wis., were leading witnesses today before the Lorimer investigation committee. Miss Carroll is the first woman witness to be called in the present hearing.

Both corroborated portions of testimony given by Hines. The committee having in view a recess next week, excused, subject to call, the three detectives whom Clarence S. Funk, general manager of the International Harvester company, said he "ditched" when he appeared on the stand and complained that they were shadowing him.

Miss Carroll declared she overheard the long distance talk Mr. Hines held with Springfield on the day Lorimer was elected and repeated the conversation substantially as Mr. Hines had done.

Remembers Only That One Talk.

On cross examination, however, she was unable to recall the date or substance of any other long distance conversations Mr. Hines had held in the ten years she had been in his employ.

Carney's testimony agreed with Hines description of how Funk approached him at the Union League club. It was in this conversation that Funk declared Hines asked him to contribute to Lorimer's election fund, whereas Hines testified that Funk asked for the privilege of contributing to such a fund. Mr. Carney said he heard nothing of the conversation.

The committee decided to take a recess from this afternoon until July 13, when it will reconvene in Washington instead of Chicago, as originally planned to continue the hearings.

NO PADDING FOR MEN'S TOGS.

Broad Shouldered, Athletic Figures to Be Given Jolt.

Boston, Mass., July 1.—The fat man, so long derided by the rest of humanity, is about to come into his own, and he of the thin, angular physique is to be made the sufferer and butt of jokes. This is expected to be the ultimatum of the National Association of Clothes Designers, who are holding their annual convention in this city. Chicago is well represented in the gathering, as are all the other large cities in the country.

Padding, which has heretofore covered a multitude of defects in the makeup of every thin man, is to be abandoned, and the lovely broad shouldered athletic figures which the ladies have been wont to admire are to pass away and nature will be allowed full riot in her unlovely productions.

The members of the association are practically agreed on the subject, although some opposition is probable.

The object of the association is the general promotion of the wholesale clothing business and to secure uniform styles.

REUNION DATE IS SEPTEMBER 27-28

Veterans of Old Thirtieth Regiment Arrange for Meeting Here.

IN WAR 50 YEARS AGO

Wednesday and Thursday, September 27 and 28, are the dates chosen for the annual reunion of the Thirtieth regiment of Indiana volunteers in Fort Wayne this year. The time was fixed at a meeting of the local executive committee held this afternoon in the office of Judge S. M. Hench, president of the local reunion committee.

In addition to Judge Hench there were present G. W. Wilbur, Thomas Toomey, George Hannon, William Brown and Asa Turner, of Fort Wayne; Major N. N. Boydston, of Warsaw, and J. W. Armstrong, of Leesburg, secretary of the association.

This will be the fiftieth anniversary of the organization, which was mustered into the service at old Camp Allen, in this city, on September 24, 1861, and left Fort Wayne for the front on October 2 of that year. The reunion date, therefore, is just between the fiftieth anniversaries of these important events in the history of the regiment. The Thirtieth is the command of which Col. Sion S. Bass was originally at the head, and in its ranks were a large number of Fort Wayne and Allen county soldiers.

A. L. RANDALL TO BUILD A GARAGE

Buys Peters Homestead on West Jefferson for $19,000.

VERY NEAR CALHOUN

Planning the erection of a big auto garage, with salesrooms in the front part of the building, A. L. Randall, of the Randall Motor Car company, today purchased from John C. Peters the old Peters homestead on the north side of West Jefferson street between Calhoun and Harrison streets.

The transaction was negotiated through the d'Isay agency, and the consideration is understood to have been $19,000. In the deal Mr. Peters takes the old Tigar property at 509 East Berry street which has been owned by Mr. Randall for $8,000.

The West Jefferson street property is 60x150 feet in size, immediately in the rear of the business houses fronting on Calhoun street, and is especially valuable from its proximity to that thoroughfare. The old brick residence occupying the property was Mr. Peters' birthplace, and he has owned it for many years. Mr. Randall says he expects to begin building by September 1 or earlier.

The memorial day executive committee at a meeting last evening paid the last of the bills and closed up matters in connection with the Decoration day observance this year.

CROWDS PURSUING RAILWAY BANDITS

BIG BOOTY IS DENIED

Erie, Pa., July 1.—A hundred or more farmers, every available police officer in the county and the state police are searching today for the train robbers that last night held up and robbed train No. 41, on the Philadelphia and Erie branch of the Pennsylvania Lines, in the most approved style of the wild west. The train was bound from Philadelphia for Chicago, and was brought to a stop shortly after 10 o'clock against ties and telephone poles piled on the track at Westville about five miles from this city.

Rifle Mail and Express Cars.

The bandits rifled the mail and express cars before they escaped, the mail clerk was shot and seriously wounded, the conductor was stoned and many passengers had narrow escapes from death and wounds by bullets.

The men who are searching for the robbers are heavily armed and an encounter with any of the bandits will result in bloodshed. The panic-stricken passengers tell conflicting stories as to the number of the robbers, but all agree that they were masked. Some say they were six, others ten.

Said to Have Got $25,000.

No accurate information is obtainable as to the amount of loot the robbers secured.

Reports that they got $25,000 which was being shipped to this city by the Adams Express, were denied by the express company as well as by the railroad officials.

The train was rounding Five Mile Curve at reduced speed when Engineer Albert Carey, who was responsible for 500 or more passengers the train carried, saw the obstruction on the track in the reflection of the locomotive headlight. The locomotive crashed into the pile of timber and came to a stop. Had the train been running at any kind of speed it would have been hurled over the outer side of the curve, down an embankment to rocks 200 feet below.

SAY ROBBERS GOT NO BOOTY.

Philadelphia, July 1.—According to official reports received today at the Pennsylvania railroad offices here, no mail or express matter was taken by the men who held up the train near Erie last night.

The company has a large force of its own police on trail of the gang. The officials here say the holdup was the work of a gang of Italians, who may have been drinking and suddenly conceived the idea of holding up and robbing the train.

ACCEPTS CALL TO BUFFALO.

Lafayette, Ind., July 1.—Rev. Conrad Hassell, for twelve years president of the board of home missions of the Reformed church of the United States and a member of the board of foreign missions, has accepted a call to the First Reformed church at Buffalo, N. Y. Rev. Hassel has been pastor of the Salem Reformed church of this city for the past eight years.

OFFICER HAD TO MAKE HARD TRIP

Lieutenant Eisenhut Sailed in Steerage from Liverpool.

HERE WITH HIS MEN

Lieut. George Eisenhut returned at noon today from Londwon in charge of Endria Stoiche and Spiro Alexi, two Macedonians arrested at Liverpool, May 15, on a charge of grand larceny and obtaining money by false pretense from the First National bank of this city.

The officer had a hard trip homeward as he was compelled to come as a steerage passenger on the Mauretania for the reason that there was no provision aboard ship for taking care of his prisoners. There was no chance for them to escape unless they jumped overboard, but he said he had gone so far and spent so much time getting hold of them that he did not want to take a chance on losing them. The men will be arraigned in the city court on Monday morning.

He might have started on his return trip on June 22 but for the fact that all of the English authorities were busy with the arrangements for the coronation and would not sign his papers. He left here May 20 and spent more than two weeks of idle time in London waiting for the slow process of the English law.

This law made it imperative that the affidavits be translated from English to the native tongue of the Macedonians and the police in London could find only one person able to do this. The prisoners were willing to waive their right to fifteen days for appeal but the authorities would not permit it and the lieutenant had to remain until the time expired.

Eisenhut left Liverpool at 5 o'clock Friday evening of last week and arrived at New York about 1:30 Friday morning.

TWO SALOONS ROBBED

Thefts Netted the Thief a Small Amount of Money.

John Boyle's saloon at 1302 Hanna street, was robbed last night by thieves who entered through a window and got $8 in small change and between $6 and $7 in pennies.

Entrance was forced in the same way to the saloon of Charles Berning, 1413 Hanna street, where $2 in pennies was taken. The work is evidently that of local talent.

SPRINGER GETS A DIVORCE.

Denver, Col., July 1.—John W. Springer was granted a divorce today in Judge Allen's court from Isabelle Patterson Springer. The charge was mental cruelty. She was given $15,000 alimony. Mrs. Springer is the "woman in the case" in the murder of Louis Von Phul, the balloonist, for whose murder H. L. Henwood is under arrest.

ELECTED A TRUSTEE.

At a first meeting of creditors in the bankruptcy case of W. C. Crothers, of Kendallville, held in this city today, George M. Shiffer, of Fort Wayne, was elected trustee in bankruptcy.

BIRDMAN IN FINE FLIGHT

Aviator Atwood Does Hair-Raising Stunts Above New York City.

START MADE FROM NEW LONDON, CONN.

Circles Over Skyscrapers and Goes to Minecla to Alight.

New York, July 1.—The most spectacular flight in the history of American aviation was ended at Governor's Island this morning by Harry N. Atwood, with a wonderful circle about the Singer tower, almost grazing the roofs of the craggy skyscrapers below. Nothing so daring has ever been attempted by any aviator before. In France, the Eiffel tower has been circled, but the baffling cross currents from the criss-cross of canyons and cliffs of Lower Manhattan island has hitherto daunted all American aviators.

Going Too Fine to Stop.

Atwood rose from New London at 7:05 this morning with the intention of flying down the Connecticut shore and crossing Long Island Sound to the aviation field at Mineola. When he got into the air he found his motor humming so steadily and the air currents so favorable that his confidence grew and, instead of crossing the sound, he turned inland off Mt. Vernon, lowered like a falcon to reconnoiter and headed for Hell Gate and the mouth of the East river. Below him stretched the narrow tortuous course of the river crowded with traffic and spanned by four lofty steel bridges.

Does Sensational Feats.

As if laying with his perils, Atwood crossed the river to Long Island city, near the Williamsburg bridge, turned back to Manhattan island, crossing the river a second time, flew over the city at no great altitude to the lower end of the island, circled the Singer tower, deflected his course, past Trinity church and eastward to the Liberty tower and New Bankers' Trust building to Wall street and hovered in smooth spirals for a moment over the amazed curb brokers in Broad street below.

The demonstration was as complete as it lay in the power of human achievement to make it. Hitherto it has been a principle strictly held to by all aviators that whenever there was a dangerous spot to cross, the higher one could rise the safer.

Defies All Danger.

It had been calculated that for every foot of drop an properly executed volplane would carry the aeroplane forward three feet. Thus to glide out of danger to a proper landing place it was only necessary to rise high enough. But Atwood made his turn of the Singer tower at a height of 525 feet from the street and barely above the jagged gothic roof of the City Investment building directly below and beside the tower. The fluttering flag at the top of the tower showed there was a wind blowing of perhaps 15 or 20 miles an hour, not enough to bother Atwood.

Started From Boston.

Atwood's flight today is really a continuation of his flight yesterday from Squantum field, Boston, to New London, where he cut fancy figures above the winning Harvard shell as it drew to the finish line in the eight-oared varsity race. His distance then was 135 miles, covered in two hours and ten minutes. Best previous records was 106 miles made by P. C. Parmalee, a Wright pupil with Lieutenant Flouloris, U. S. A., as a passenger. Atwood carried his mechanician for a companion yesterday and repeated the feat today. His distance this morning, estimated from the map, is 122 miles and his time three hours and twenty minutes.

HELEN SAYS SHE CONDUCTS HOTEL

Does Not Want to Have Wrong Impression Get Out.

KELLY PANS WOMAN

Helen Blair says she runs a regular hotel and she does not want the impression given that she is conducting anything else in the rooms on East Superior street back of the palm garden. She was afraid she would be misunderstood as the result of a raid by the police on her hotel Friday night so she called up Sergeant Kelly at police headquarters to tell him she has a regular register in the place.

The sergeant panned her good. He informed her that she could not pull anything over on the police and that in the future she must walk straight or she will be chased out of town. At any rate she will be given a chance to explain to Judge Mungovan for Chief of Police Abbott says an affidavit will be filed against her for conducting a house of ill-fame.

She was ill and could not be taken away from the house when the raid was made this morning. Three couples were arrested and one of the women said she had registered at the place twice during the present week and that each time she was accompanied by a different man. Helen's register will probably explain all of this.

One of the men taken in the raid lives in Fort Wayne, the other in Decatur and the third in Garrett. One of the women is married, another had never been in court before today and the third recently arrived from Indianapolis. All put up bond and gave fictitious names and their fines of $15 and costs were paid from the bond money. They netted $90.

Bessie Belmore made a fight to show that she was not a woman of bad repute but the police proved she was and she drew $15 and costs which she didn't have the money to pay. Suspicion has been directed to the Blair house for some time and it will probably be closed by the police.

The Other Cases.

For a vicious assault in which he struck his mother with a big club and knocked her unconscious, Tony Ridley, a negro youth, was fined $100 and costs and given six months in jail.

Victor Allen tried to "fix" everybody concerned in the scrape in which he cut Ernest Ayers so badly that a dozen stitches were required to close the wound but the judge would not stand for it and he gave him $10 and costs and ten days in jail. The fine was paid by his father.

Charles Carter stole a rug from a Pape furniture store wagon and was given a licking by Charles Kleinschmith, the driver, and turned loose, but Patrolman Paul picked him up and he got $10 and costs and ten days.

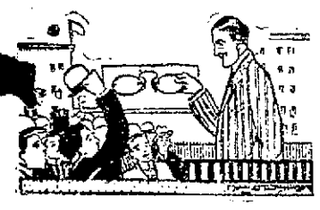

Barney Craig got out of jail and collected $23 that was coming to him. He spent $3 for a jag and hid the rest in a stump at Robison park and couldn't find it. This morning he was let go to give him a chance to find his money.

John Thomas, an Indian from Peru, Mike Neal and John Ryan, plain drunks, were let go and Charles Brown was fined $1 and costs and George Mansfield got the same.

The case against Roy Foster, charged with the theft of a revolver and a hatchet, was continued until Monday.

HAD RESIDED HERE OVER FORTY YEARS

MET WITH ACCIDENT

Mrs. Polly Spice, a pioneer resident of Fort Wayne, died at midnight Friday at St. Joseph's hospital, at the age of 81 years 4 months and 3 days. Death was due to senility. Eighteen months ago Mrs. Spice removed to Lutheran hospital to make that institution her home. The day after her arrival there she fell and broke her hip, and has been bedfast since that time. She was removed to St. Joseph's hospital from the Lutheran hospital five months ago. The deceased was born in England, February 27, 1830. During her residence there she was married to John Brooks, and came to Fort Wayne with him over forty years ago. Mr. Brooks died twenty years ago and three years after his death she was united in marriage to John Spice, who preceded her in death two years ago. The deceased was a member of the Bethany Presbyterian church. She had a large circle of friends and was noted for her many kindly and charitable acts. She is survived by one nephew, Fred Fowler, residing at 701 Runnion avenue. Robert Spice is a step-son.

Funeral services Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock from the residence of the nephew, thence to Bethany Presbyterian church at 10 o'clock. Rev. C. O. Shirey officiating. Services at the residence will be private.

CRESSLER.

Mrs. A. D. Cressler, whose death Friday afternoon at the family residence, 501 West Berry street, was briefly noted in The Sentinel Friday evening, had been in failing health for some months, but few aside from her most intimate friends knew of her critical condition and news of her demise came as a most distressing and unexpected shock. The patient lapsed into unconsciousness some hours before her demise and did not again rally, passing peacefully from a life in which she had been generous, helpful and kindly.

Mrs. Cressler came of a distinguished family. Her father was Kerr Murray, a very prominent pioneer citizen of Fort Wayne and founder of the great manufacturing institution which still bears his name. Both father and mother were of Scotch birth, and Mrs. Cressler was also a native of Scotland, coming to America with her parents when but a child. The family lived for a short time in Buffalo, removing to Fort Wayne in 1854. The daughter was educated in St. Augustine's academy, and her marriage to Mr. Cressler occurred October 13, 1874. Surviving members of the family include the husband and three sons, Alfred M., George H. and Kerr Murray Cressler, all of whom were at the bedside when the loved wife and mother passed away.

Of exalted character, fine impulses and kindly graces, Mrs. Cressler drew about her a very large circle of friends. Domestic in her tastes, she gave to her home life the first and most devoted of her ministrations, but her broad sympathies and her charming womanliness actuated her in countless acts of unostentatious charity and helpfulness and kindness. She gave liberally both of means and of effort to many causes which appealed to her, and was interested in the largest measure in numerous movements for culture and true philanthropy. She was one of the earliest supporters of the Relief Union work and was an associate member of the Morning Musical. Unfailingly cheerful of disposition and possessed of an inherent graciousness and gentleness, she made these influences contribute largely to the happiness of all whose privilege it was to know her. Mrs. Cressler was a member of the First Presbyterian church.

Funeral services Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence, with private interment at Lindenwood.

Rev. Dr. D. W. Moffatt, D. D., will officiate at the funeral service.

FUNERAL NOTICES.

Huguenard.—Funeral services for Louis Huguenard will be held Monday morning at 8:15 o'clock from the residence, 2518 North Clinton street, thence to the Cathedral at 9 o'clock.

BIRTH RECORD.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Robinson, 1013 East Wayne street—a son.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Fosnaught, of Hayden road—a daughter.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kent, 816 Jackson street, a son.

J. J. DISSER TO BE THE MANAGER

Will Have Charge of New German-American Financial Institution.

THE BANK DIVIDENDS

J. J. Disser, for some years connected with the clerical force in the office of the motive power department of the Pennsylvania railroad in this city, will be the manager of the new financial institution to be established by German-American interests at Calhoun and Holman streets as soon as the new building now under way is completed.

Mr. Disser has resigned his position with the Pennsylvania company and for the present has taken a position as individual book-keeper at the German-American bank. Here he succeeds Albert Allgeier, who leaves to enter the Christian Brothers' school at Baltimore, Md. Mr. Disser will remain with the bank until the new south side branch is opened some months hence.

Banks Declare Dividends.

July 1 is the semi-annual dividend period for a number of banks and trust companies of the city, and the directors of the various institutions yesterday declared the usual dividends after making an addition to the surplus accounts. The Old National's semi-annual dividend was 4 per cent, the First National's was 5 per cent, and that of the Hamilton National 6 per cent, while the Citizens' Trust company declared its customary dividend of 3 per cent, checks for which were in the hands of the stockholders today. The German-American bank and the Tri-State, People's and German-American Trust companies do not declare dividends at this time of the year. Without exception officials of Fort Wayne financial institutions say the business of the past six months has been highly satisfactory.

INDICTMENTS FOUND AGAINST BIG TRUST OFFICIALS

HERBERT L. SATTERLEE. FRANK J. GOULD. CHARLES F. BROOKER. FERDINAND W. ROEBLING.

Men high up in the world of finance have been indicted by the federal Grand Jury which has been hearing evidence in New York against officials of the United States Steel Corporation, the Wire Trust, its subsidiaries and many independent steel companies. Among the most prominently mentioned in the indictment are Frank J. Gould and Herbert L. Satterlee, son-in-law of J. Pierpont Morgan, and who is president of the Hubirshaw Wire Company, of Yonkers, N. Y.

Charles F. Brooker, vice president of the Ansonia Brass and Copper Company and a member of the Republican National Committee from Connecticut, and Ferdinand N. Roebling, of John A. Roebling Sons' Company, are also named.

RINGLINGS TO SHOW HERE.

Two Exhibitions in Fort Wayne on Friday, July 21.

It is officially announced today that Ringling Bros.' world's greatest shows will give two performances in this city on Friday, July 21. The performances will be the same as those presented in the Coliseum at Chicago and Madison Square Garden, New York.

The Ringlings have an all feature show. Not content with owning the biggest and best circus in the world, they have kept on growing and improving. It is their policy to grow and improve. They cannot help it. They are still young men and not at all content to rest on past glories. Perfection is their aim. They have practically attained it.

The foreign agents of the show are an unusually energetic and progressive set of men. They have stripped Europe and Asia of all its best talent for this year's tour of America. And fate was kind to them. Last winter was an unusually productive season in Europe in the way of novelties. They were all secured. The cost of this importation of talent would have bankrupt any other show in America.

Meantime in the tropics of South America, India and Africa, squads of trappers searched the forests, jungles and everglades in search of curiosities. In Africa the chieftains of several savage tribes were induced to leave their people behind and help to entertain the United States. Also a great many curious specimens of animal life fell into the nets of the expedition. In India a capture was made in a single day that is almost priceless. It is Tiny Tom Tinker, the smallest elephant ever seen.

From early last fall up to the first thaws of spring an army of Italian and French artists and property builders worked night and day in the foreign workshops of the show at Stoke-on-Trent, England, devising and building the new equipment which is this year displayed free upon the streets of every city visited. It is the grandest spectacle ever presented by a circus. It costs enough money to buy any other show. It is a pictorial history of the world, peopled with 1,280 men, women and children from every corner of the earth.

This wonderful organization is hauled from town to town on eighty-five sixty-foot railroad cars, making a train over a mile in length. The train is divided in five sections. The daily expenses of the show are $7,500. There are 650 horses, 1,000 wild animals. It takes fourteen acres of canvas to house this big family.

Famous Band With Ringling Circus.

Albert C. Sweet's famous concert band is this season furnishing the incidental music for Ringling Bros.' circus. This band is one of the best musical organizations in New York city, and Sweet is the champion cornet player of America, having been a virtuoso with Sousa for many years.

MAY END SHIP STRIKE.

Liverpool, July 1.—It was officially announced thi sevening that the Cunard, the White Star and other "combine" lines and the Harrison line had agreed to recognize the dockers union and to attend a conference iwthin a month for the settlement of questions of wages and conditions of employment.

BANDITS FAIL IN JOB.

Princeton, Ind., July 1.—Two men with drawn revolvers early today attempted to hold up the Southern ticket office at Mt. Carmel, Ill., but were driven off by Night Agent Swark, who began shooting the instant his hands were ordered up. The men escaped, after an exchange of shots none of which took effect.

BANK TELLER INDICTED.

Cleveland, O., July 1.—Julius Hopkins, former teller of the First National bank, indicted by the federal grand jury for embezzling funds of the bank totaling approximately $104,000 today pleded guilty before Federal Judge William L. Day and was sentenced to serve seven years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kas.

The Home Telephone and Telegraph company has just completed the installation of a private inter-communicating telephone system in the new suburban residence of A. Z. Polhamus, on South Broadway.

EMMAUS TO CELEBRATE.

Lutheran Congregation Will Go to Grove for the Fourth.

A good time is assured all who attend the tenth annual picnic of the Emmaus Lutheran congregation to be held on July 4th, one block south of the Packard Piano Co. building. The parade, headed by the Packard band, will leave the church, corner Creighton avenue and Broadway, at 9.00 o'clock a. m. and march to the site of the festivities. About 300 school children will participate in the line of march, also the school board and board of trustees. There will be amusements of all kinds on the picnic grounds. The school children will sing a number of songs and take part in the different races and athletic events during the day. Meals will be served and there will be plenty refreshments, etc. The Packard band which has been engaged for the day, will give a concert during the afternoon, for which occasion a special program has been arranged which is as follows:

1. March—"United Nativas"... ..... Bagley
2. "Grand American Fantasie".. ..... Tobain
3. "Bits of Remick's Hits" .... Lampe

10. Selection "Madam Sherry"... ..... Hoschna
11. Cupid's Patrol .....Moret
12. Overture "Phedre"....Massenet
13. Selection—"The Soul Kiss".. ..... Levi
14. March—"Second Brigade"... ..... Winkler

CHANGE TIME OF SERVICE.

St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church Has New Schedule.

Beginning tomorrow the time of service of the St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church will be changed. Until last Sunday the German service was held in the morning and the English every Sunday evening. From tomorrow on, however, both services will take place in the morning, the German to begin at 9 a. m. and the English at 10:45. The new arrangement will continue throughout the summer months.

TAKES OVER PLAYGROUNDS.

City School Board Assumed Jurisdiction Today.

City school authorities today assumed jurisdiction over the three public playgrounds in Fort Wayne—the Guildin, the Holman street and the Bowser grounds—at the request of the Playgrounds association.

Under the law the city school board is empowered to take charge of them and provide and pay attendants during the vacation interim between terms of school, and the attendants were placed at all the grounds this afternoon by the school board.

The new Bowser ground was put into service today, but its formal dedication will not occur until one week hence. This ground is located at Fisher and Winter streets.

BADLY INJURED BY FALL.

Small Boy Falls From Wabash Railroad Bridge.

Dewey Sandmeyer, the 12-year-old son of Charles W. Sandmeyer, 2418 Thompson avenue, fell from the Wabash bridge, in the southwest part of the city, to the ground this morning and sustained a fractured hip and a fractured arm and a number of severe body bruises. He was removed to the Lutheran hospital.

CELEBRATIONS RESULT IN FIRE.

Premature celebration of the Fourth resulted in the residence of H. Leonard, 1023 Webster street, being slightly damaged this morning, when the roof was set ablaze by firecrackers. The roof of the residence of Mrs. Victoria Seibold, 1345 Huestis avenue, caught fire from fireworks about 9:30 o'clock Friday evening. Sparks from a chimney set fire to the roof of the residence of C. D. Felger, 618 Runnion avenue, shortly after 9 o'clock this morning and caused a small loss. The fire department was called out to extinguish all three of the fires.

MAY END SHIP STRIKE.

Liverpool, July 1.—The seamen strike situation took a favorable turn this evening when several lines agreed to recognize the Dockers' union and later meet in conference with them and arrange a permanent agreement concerning all matters in dispute. The crews are returning to the liners tonight in anticipation of a settlement with the dockers which the strike leaders believe will be arranged before Monday.

WHOLESALE... FOR DOUBLE FE...

Must Take Out Two Licenses to Operate Under the New Law.

LICENSES ON MONDAY

Under the provisions of the Proctor liquor law the wholesalers are hit a hard blow as they are required to take both retail and wholesale licenses to operate their business where they formerly took out only one.

Chrles Y... is the applicant who will ... board of ... commissioners on Monday for license and he will have to pay the county $400 for the privilege of operating. If the city sees fit to make him pay for his retail business, then he will have to add $300 more but it has not been customary heretofore to pay the city anything.

The retail end of the business consists of selling in small quantities with now and then the sale of a single drink, but the dealer take no chances as the blind tiger law might enter into the matter if they had no state retail licenses.

The following applications have been filed: John P. Boyle, Montgomery and Hanna; Joseph Johns, New Haven; Henry Pfeiffer, 602 Harrison street; Frank D. Evans, 256 East Main; Frank J. NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

MANY ATTEND BIG FRAT CONVENTION

Phi Delta Kappas Assemble at Peru —Dances and Picnics Galore —Elect Officers.

Peru, Ind., July 1.—The attendance at the Phi Delta Kappa national convention which is in session here is larger than at any previous convention of the fraternity and the delegates say they are having the best time of their lives so far as social functions are concerned. There is no intermission excepting the sleeping hours. There were two hundred in the grand march at the first dance in the Moose hall.

Thursday there were two short business sessions. The girls had a picnic at the city park, to which the boys were invited. At 6 o'clock last evening the boys met at the Bearss hotel and there was a big parade, headed by the Third Regiment band, leading to the Ben Hur hall, where an elaborate banquet was enjoyed. J. Ross Woodring was toastmaster.

The girls were not invited to this function, but they were not angry over the matter, for they, too, had a banquet at The Cliffs, a beautiful resort four miles southeast of the city on the Missinnewa river. They made the trip to the place in automobiles, most of which were driven by the young ladies. Yesterday the girls had open house and in the evening the big dance was given in the Moose hall.

Before the meeting adjourns new officers will be elected. Wayne Monahan, of Fort Wayne, and Rouhier Howard, of this city, are candidates for the national presidency.

FALLS UNDER TEAM.

Five-Year-Old Girl Trampled Under Hoofs of Plow Horses.

Warsaw, Ind., July 1.—Esther, the 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jones, of one and one-half miles east of Etna Green, was painfully and perhaps seriously injured as a result of a peculiar accident at about 5 o'clock on Thursday evening.

The little girl went to the field to meet her father, who was at work there with a team of horses. When they started for the house the little girl wanted to ride one of the horses. Complying with her wish, the father placed her on the back of one of the animals. After a few steps had been taken, the child slipped off on one side and fell under the horse in such a position that the animal stepped on her abdomen with one of its back feet.

NEW PICTURE THEATER.

Auburn, Ind., July 1.—If nothing unforeseen occurs to mar the plans of Miss Leah Little, she will have her new moving picture theater in operation in two weeks. Workmen are engaged in making the necessary changes in the building on Main street, and the stock of goods has been nearly sold out.

A MOTHER'S DUTY

It is the duty of every expectant mother to prepare her system for the coming of her little one; to avoid as far as possible the suffering of such occasions, and endeavor to pass through the crisis with her health and strength unimpaired. This she may do through the use of Mother's Friend, a remedy that has been so long in use, and accomplished so much good, that it is in no sense an experiment, but a preparation which always produces the best results. It is for exernal application and so penetrating in its nature as to thoroughly lubricate every muscle, nerve and tendon involved during the period before baby comes. It aids nature by expanding the skin and tissues, relieves tenderness and soreness, and perfectly prepares the system for natural and safe motherhood. Mother's Friend has been used and endorsed by thousands of mothers, and its use will prove a comfort and a benefit to any woman in need of such a remedy. Mother's Friend is sold at drug stores. Write for free book for expectant mothers, which contains much valuable information.

CONFERENCE SET FOR AUGUST 18TH

Eel River General Conference Will Be Held at North Manchester —Expect 200 Guests.

North Manchester, Ind., July 1.—Members of the Christian churches of Wabash county, belonging to the Eel river conference, are planning to attend the general conference which will be held at this place commencing on Friday, August 18, and continuing until Wednesday of the next week. It is expected that from 150 to 200 visiting ministers and members will be present at that time and arrangements will be made to entertain them in the homes of the members of the church and of citizens who can care for one or more of them.

The conference will be under the direction of O. W. Whitelock, of Huntington, who is president, a position he has held for many years.

Sessions will be a combination of business and social features. All of the reports of the various churches of the conference will be audited and preparation made for work for the next year. Ministers are not located by this conference, as each church selects its own minister, and contracts with him as it may see fit. Otherwise the conferences hold about the same relation to the church as the annual conferences of the United Brethren and the Methodists do to those societies.

UNION CHURCH SERVICES.

Seven Congregations of Kendallville Will Unite in Worship.

Kendallville, Ind., July 1.—The first of the union church services to be conducted during the hot summer months will be held at the Airdome tomorrow evening and A. L. Helton, manager of the Airdome, was busy today preparing the place for the meetings. The churches that will affiliate in these services are the Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Christian, Baptist, Evangelical, Methodist Protestant and Episcopal.

One of the features of the services will be the choir which will consist of voices from the various congregations and should be one of the largest and best ever gathered for this purpose. There will be no public advance announcement as to who will preach, but each minister will take a turn to deliver a sermon.

This is the first time that an experiment of this kind has been made here and without a doubt it will prove a success. There will be special music and an invitation is cordially extended to the public.

LARGE FUNERAL AT OSSIAN.

Ossian, Ind., July 1.—The funeral of Dr. John I. Metts, held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the Ossian M. E. church, was one of the largest in the history of this section of the county, the church would not accommodate many who would have liked to attend the services. Dr. Metts was known over the entire county, and was a personal friend of a large per cent of the people of Jefferson and Union townships, and despite the busy harvest season many country people as well as those from the towns were in attendance.

PAVING MACHINERY ARRIVES.

Wabash, Ind., July 1.—The Western Construction company has a force of men unloading several cars of machinery at the Allen street switch of the Wabash railroad in this city. Four cars of asphalt machinery has been sent here for the preparing of the asphalt for the pavement of Cass street and Manchester avenue and the grade work on the streets is such that the paving will be started as soon as the machinery can be set up and got into running order.

BARBERS ORGANIZE.

Decatur, Ind., July 1.—From now on Decatur barbers will be known as an organized branch of the International Journeymen Barbers' union, as the organization of a local took place Thursday evening at the Harve Sprague shop on Madison street Nearly every shop in the city was represented. A charter has been secured and from now on will hold meetings to attend to business affairs and the coming together on questions pertaining to the business, as are held in other cities.

PAINTER SECURES PATENT.

Columbia City, Ind., July 1.—M. H. Mosher, the painter and paper hanger of this city, was granted a patent this week on his operating mechanism for a street railway switch. The device works automatically, allowing the motorman to change his car by a lever to a switch on either side of the main track. The inventor has worked quite industriously for the past year on the device and believes he has something useful and practical.

PREACHER TURNS EDITOR.

Andrews, Ind., July 1.—Rev. F. D. Durham, of this place, one of the successful preachers of the smaller towns of this county, has resigned from the ministry and will enter the newspaper field. This week's issue of the Roanoke Review will contain the announcement that he is now the editor of that publication.

ANOTHER POSTAL BANK.

Montpelier, Ind., July 1.—Postmaster Troutman, of this city, received notice from the department this morning that the Montpelier office has been designated as a postal savings depository and the date of beginning set as July 27.

MARKLE HAS BOOSTERS.

Huntington, Ind., July 1.—To announce and advertise the big event which will be in order at Markle on July 4, over twenty Markle men came to this city last Thursday night in eight automobiles. Eighteen of those who came comprised a band.

STEEL TRUST IS HIT HARD BLOW

Bureau of Corporations Says It Was Formed to Limit Trade.

HAS ORE MONOPOLY

Washington, July 1.—The long expected and much discussed report from the bureau of corporations on the United States Steel corporation recently submitted to President Taft was made public here last night.

Signed by Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, the report makes no recommendations and is almost wholly narrative in form. Mr. Smith declares that restriction of competition was a prime object of the organizers of the steel corporation, or so called "trust."

Capitalized at $1,402,000,000, the corporation, he asserts, had tangible property worth only $682,000,000. By a constant reinvestment of earnings, however, the report points out, much of the "water" in the company has been eliminated.

The steel corporation now owns 75 per cent of the lake ores, having recently concentrated its efforts to securing these properties. On this point the report says:

"Indeed, insofar as the steel corporation's position in the entire iron and steel industries is of monopolistic character it is chiefly true its control of ore holdings and the transportation of ore."

Discussing in detail how "the impending struggle of the giants" was averted almost overnight by the formation of the great combination of combinations, taking in 250 subsidiary companies controlling 60 per cent. of the total crude and finished steel production of the country, the report says:

"Until 1898 the bulk of the business was distributed among a very considerable number of concerns. There was sharp competition, modified by frequent pools of greater or less duration and effectiveness."

Era of Great Combinations.

Then came an era of great combinations, the report continues, with capitalizations ranging from $30,000,000 to $100,000,000, mergers of many smaller companies, which instead of eliminating competition, threatened to bring price-cutting on a larger scale than ever before. In 1899-1900 there were three great companies—the Carnegie company, Federal Steel and National Steel—dominating the production of crude and semi-finished products, and six concerns—the American Steel and Wire, American Tin Plate, American Steel Hoop, American Sheet Steel, National Tube and American Bridge—controlling the lighter finished products.

All nine of the companies named were combined, and later the Union Steel company, the Clairton Steel company and, in 1907, the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company, were taken over. The promoting syndicate putting the deal through netted $62,500,000 in cash.

Pays Big on Investment.

During the ten years of its operation the report says the steel trust has paid average annual profits of 12 per cent. on the money invested. In this connection attention is called to the fact that a considerable part of the investment is in undeveloped or unworked properties, showing that dividends from paying properties must be much larger than the average would indicate. Insisting upon computing profits upon a tangible property value basis, the report says that the steel corporation in defending its book valuation undoubtedly would claim that there was a "merger value." As to this the commissioner says:

"It is probably true that the various properties acquired by the steel corporation, taken together with the organization of this company as a growing concern, do have a value in excess of the sum of their values as separate entities.

"The co-ordination and integration made possible by the combination of such properties under a single control undoubtedly tend to reduce costs either through economies or through removing the necessity of paying profits to others.

Grave Question of Policy.

"Further, insofar as the concentration of the industry under control of a single concern gives to it a monopolistic power over prices and production, this may result in an increase in its earning power and consequently in an increase in its value as a going concern. This involves, however, the reduction of actual or potential competition. To allow a single company which has secured the bulk of a given industry, credit for such a merger value as a basis on which to earn profits raises, therefore, a question of far-reaching public policy. To regard a valuation so arrived at as justifying such profits under these conditions would be reasoning in a circle, because the real question is whether the profits themselves used to determine the capitalization were reasonable."

Assets and Securities.

The present valuation of the combine's tangible property is placed at about $1,187,000,000 asagainst $1,468,000,000 outstanding securities; an increase of $487,000,000 in property, while only about $66,000,000 has been added to capitalization.

Reviewing the combine's present position in the industry, the report says that from the beginning the corporation has overshadowed its principal rivals, even exceeding all of its competitors combined, and while in the ten years of operation its control of production has dropped from 60 to 50 per cent., approximately, its position in ore reserves is much stronger.

The advantage of controlling 75 per cent. of the lake ores, on which the industry is based, is materially enhanced by rail transportation from the mines to the lakes.

TRUSTS NO LONGER AFRAID.

That Wall street no longer fears the anti-trust laws and that it does derive much comfort and take great confidence from the supreme court of the United States is very strikingly disclosed by the steadiness of United States steel stocks during the past day or two. The indictment of near a hundred men connected with the wire pool violations affected the market course of steel very little and the explosion of the long-expected report of the federal investigation of the United States steel company did not affect the market a trifle, unless it be noted that steel gained a fraction. Wall street and the corporation mongers take counsel of the finale in the Standard Oil and Tobacco trust prosecutions, both of which concerns were told to dissolve and in effect advised to find for themselves some fashion of organization and business conduct that will not be a technical violation of the Sherman law. The saving grace of that interpolation upon "unreasonable restraint" of trade doubtless encourages Wall street and the big corporations and great financial interests to have faith that hereafter "trust-busting" will have no worse consequences than obliging them to find a way to go round the law. The administration is promoting an elaborate scheme of anti-trust prosecutions under a law that so far as curbing trusts and preventing monopoly may be concerned seems to be about as effective as campaign oratory, while ahead of it all looms the supreme court and the light of its recent decisions. There certainly is not much to fear. Of course there is the contingency that congress may pass an anti-trust law that will hit monopoly square in the wind, but it is indefinite and remote. As Judge Grosscup, of the United States circuit bench says, the supreme court decisions have nullified the Sherman law. Of what are the trusts to show fear?

Putting householders under compulsion of providing themselves with garbage cans of approved pattern will not solve the garbage problem so long as the city tolerates the negligence of the garbage collectors. So long as garbage cans with covers do not overflow the confinement of household refuse does not present a very serious question, but the cans do overflow, garbage is accumulated in exposed heaps and is thrown into sewer basins or left to rot in backyards, breeding places of disease and incubators for flies. The city will not solve the garbage problem by pursuing householders with warrants and compelling them to buy cans designed to mitigate the negligence of garbage men. The people of the city can and should put the city council and the administration under compulsion to do the sensible, practical and necessary thing, and that is to provide Fort Wayne with a new crematory and an efficient system of garbage collection. No other effort at solution will prove anything more or anything better than a makeshift.

The supreme court of the state sustains the recent law under which the railroad commission has power to order the elevation of tracks where grade crossings with highways involve danger to the public. This decision is far-reaching and enforcement of the law ought to result in many scores fewer accidents in Indiana within a short term. There are hundreds of highly dangerous grade crossings that ought to be abolished. The old sign, "Look out for the Locomotive," may answer very well where it is possible to look out, but numerous crossings present certain physical obstacles to taking this precaution. The electric roads have greatly multiplied the grade crossing accidents in the rural districts. They have numerous curves and the cars run with much less noise than steam trains, while there is no locomotive to puff up clouds of warning smoke a mile or two away.

"Lord, how the world is given to lying!" Bluff old Jack Falstaff was moved to that exclamation some centuries ago, according to the veracious Shakespeare. If the old blowhard were on the job at the Lorimer hearing not even his original and enriched vocabulary would be equal to the situation. "There is perjury here," was the comment of Senator Kenyon, as he listened to the testimony of one of the star witnesses, and such must have been the conclusions of all the committee. After the case as it affects the title of Lorimer to his seat has been disposed of there will remain the raw material for some investigations of the perjury that provoked the new senator from Iowa to take note of the lying that had been in progress under the quiz of the senators.

In planning an expanded sewer system for Fort Wayne the engineers will seek to meet the needs of the city for the next thirty years and make provision for a community of from 150,000 to 175,000 people. Does that strike you as having some of the extravagance of a midsummer joke? Figure it out for yourself. Uniform increase of population such as was shown during the decade from 1900 to 1910 will make Fort Wayne in thirty years a city of 175,000. With the Erie and Michigan canal coming along to do the biggest job of boosting Fort Wayne has ever enjoyed, the percentage of increase should be larger than during the last decennial period. Maybe the engineers would do better to figure on 200,000.

It appears that after all the steel trust is a trust, that it was organized to limit competition and in restraint of trade and that it is about everything that Judge Gary in his recent testimony before a congressional committee said it was not. The investigation reported by the federal commissioner of corporations makes up a rather comprehensive indictment of the steel trust which, together with the bills returned by a United States grand jury against the men who control the wire industry, promises to give the biggest corporation in the world several unpleasant half hours.

The shipping strike on the Atlantic continues to spread and the peace prospect does not flatter the hope. The thousands of Americans who have deserted home and country for the coronation and other old world diversions are over there all right, but the getting home bids fair to be another and more distracting story.

The steel trust was made by J. P. Morgan. That fact concentrates and embodies about all the good reasons there can be for a trust and is prima facie evidence of a more or less impressive and convincing kind that the steel trust has been doing what it was expected to do.

Ed Hines says that Taft was "in with the game" to "put Lorimer over." Taft says he was not. As a gentleman of proved veracity Mr. Hines seems to be putting the president of the United States into a hole with a rather narrow outlet.

Ed Hines is organizing and equipping with a right tidy and select membership a little Ananias club of his own. He has netted a president, one United States senator and all the men he ever talked to about Lorimer.

WILL YOU REST OR WILL YOU COLLAPSE THIS HOT WEATHER?

(Rev. George R. Stuart in Chattanooga News.)

This is an intense age. The telephone, the telegraph, quick delivery and rapid transit has quickened our gait until the business world is in a sweeping gallop from morn till eve. Insanity, suicide and collapse are daily reported—every fellow trying to get fixed. The more we get the more intense becomes the strain and the greater the facilities for worry. The millionaire takes his automobile ride and gazes on the trees and parks and flowers, but sees them not; the business game in which he is engaged occupies his mental vision and absorbs his thought. His passing remark on surrounding things is but an interjection to the current of his business thought which goes on. This strain must wear and collapse must come, and then off for rest and recuperation. Alas! too late! There are hundreds of nominal rest resorts and thousands of people attend them, but in many cases it is simply a change of place of friction. At most of our rest resorts, lounging, dancing, card-playing, doping or drinking, reading books of intense plot in love, passion and intrigue, occupy the time—with golf for a few hours of the day, in which a few engage.

If you seek the slum resorts you will find the same things going on in more intense form and on lower plains. Look into tired faces and debauched features and read the result. Mental, physical and moral dissipation are not restful. If they lift tension and exhaustion at one point, they produce it at another. There are a few great rest resorts where things conducive to mental, moral and physical health and recreation are provided, and all burning, debilitating, exhausting, dissipating things are eliminated. At the close of a rest season at one of these places one returns to work strong in body, mind and character. Health is invigorated, mind is refreshed and quickened and the moral nature is enlarged and fortified. Life is extended and life's work more joyous and efficient.

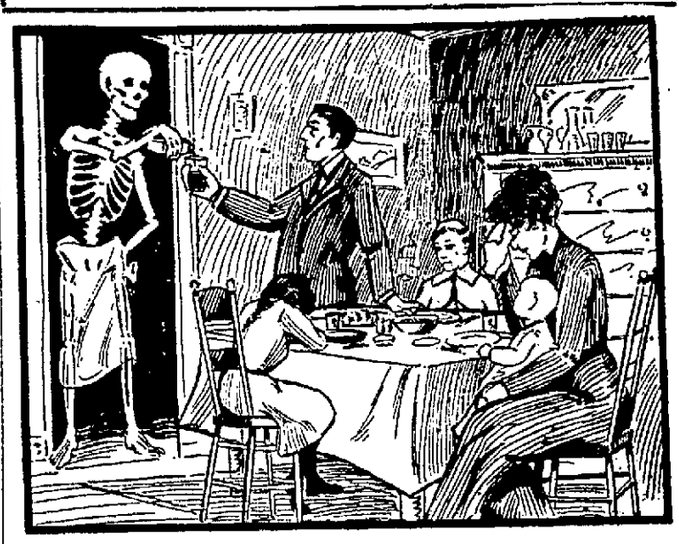

The three greatest resorts of this character are Ocean Grove, N. J., Chautauqua, N. Y., Winona Lake, Ind. The man or woman who really discovers one of these or similar resorts creates an epoch in life worth while.

Several years ago I was invited to Winona Lake, Ind., to lecture in their great auditorium. Entering the spacious grounds I was amazed at the delightful vision that met my eyes. As I walked through the grounds to the hotel I saw to right and left flower beds that cost hundreds of dollars each season; walks, drives, statuary, trees, flowers, fountains, birds, children, young men, young women, tennis grounds, poetic nooks and corners—in short, a kind of fairy land appearance. In the distance was the lake, with scores of boats and launches ladened with happy youngsters, singing, laughing, chatting; in another direction the golf links, with old and young enjoying the sport together. In the bandstand was a superb band filling the park with music, to which the happy throng seemed to be chatting, rowing and playing. At the splendid hotel I found the clean and cultured, some reading, some chatting—all happy. At the great auditorium I found five thousand enthusiastic hearers. After a day of recreation they were ready for entertainment, or instruction. Mixed in with all these wholesome outdoor sports were lectures, sermons, musical concerts, great bands, soloists and artists in all departments of music. No dancing, no cards, no wine, no voluptuous dressing, no unholy flirting—but clean, wholesome life and recreation. In the fall, old and young return to their homes, schools and business invigorated in health, rested in body, built up intellectually and morally. Home is happier, life is sweeter and character is strengthened. No unholy passions indulged, no wrong appetites increased, no unholy relations formed—but clean, wholesome recreation for body, mind and heart. We all need such rest. Now is the time to take it. Try some sane and wholesome resort this season.

The Methodist Episcopal church, south, has just organized a company of four hundred business men, and they have formed a stock company of a million dollars to establish at Waynesville, N. C., a great Southern Chautauqua and assembly for the entire Methodist church. All the southern states have joined in the enterprise and it promises to be the largest thing of the kind ever established in America. They are building a dam to create a lake with a five-mile shore line; this lake in the mountains will be six hundred feet higher than Asheville, N. C. The Methodists of the whole south are expected to erect their summer cottages here and an auditorium to seat five thousand people will be erected and a program for the entire summer, similar to the program at Chautauqua, N. Y., and Winona Lake, Ind. They expect to be ready by 1912. Engineers, landscape gardeners and forces of hands are now at work. The lots will be put on the market in a few weeks and hundreds of cottages will soon be under way. Preparations are being made for fifty thousand people to summer there. Nearby the Presbyterian and Baptist churches are establishing similar places! The Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. are to locate in this section a summer resort. This section has been selected as the rallying ground for all Christian purposes. Here summer homes may be built and owned under most favorable conditions, and all denominations find congenial companionship and helpful programs. These enterprises will mark a new era in summer resorts and recreation and will meet a need of years. Thousands of southern people need to seek a cooler climate for a few months of the summer, and no better place can be found than the mountains of North Carolina.

Till the resort is ready, why not try this season one of our northern assemblies, which furnish not oly rest and recreation of the best kind, but along with rest give helpful programs. If this line should lead one family to a better way of spending the summer, I shall feel repaid.

OUR TEMPERANCE DEPARTMENT

THE LAWYER'S STORY.

The young men had made great preparations for their fishing trip into the Indian Territory, and their disappointment was deep when on the very morning they were to start the lawyer, whom they all liked, told them he could not go.

As a last resort the others went in a body—six of them—to his office, and demanded that he tell them why he had deserted, when he had been most enthusiastic in planning the outing.

"If you're really to understand it," he said, "I'll have to begin with my own boyhood. My father—the best father, I think, that a boy ever had—always showed me a tenderness which, even as a child, I knew was somewhat different from the love which playmates had from their parents. It was not until I was about fourteen years old that he told me why this was so.

"Although he himself lived a most exemplary life, his father, his father's father, and two of his uncles had been drunkards. The taste of liquor he believed to be hereditary in our family, and in me he had recognized many of the traits he himself possessed, and which had made his own life a long fight against the habit of drink. He pointed out the danger that lay before me, and begged me to give him my promise never, under any circumstances, to touch liquor. 'It is your safety,' he said.

"Of course I promised. He had never talked to me in that way before, and, of course, it made an impression on me. I was frightened, and for several years I kept my promise. Then I went with some young fellows on an all-day fishing trip. While we were eating our luncheon one of our number, a boy whom we all admired, took a bottle of whisky from his pocket, drank from it and passed it to his next neighbor. The bottle went around the circle, for not one dared to refuse to follow George's lead. When it came to me I tried to pass it on without drinking, but the others began to tease and ridicule me until, from sheer cowardice, I took a drink. A second and a third followed, and I began to realize that I liked the stuff and wanted more of it. My father's warning flashed across my mind: 'If you take one drink, you may be forever lost.'

"The rest of the day passed wretchedly enough, and I was glad when it was time to start for home. When I reached the house, I found my father, whom I had left in good health in the morning, was lying at the point of death. He had had a sudden attack of heart disease. They told me he was anxious to see me alone, and, with a breaking heart, I entered the room. He could not move and could hardly speak, but as I took his hand and bowed my head upon it, crying, he smiled tenderly and lovingly on me. As I bent down to kiss him he noticed the odor of liquor on my breath. I shall never forget the look of agony, of despair, in his eyes.

"'My poor—lost—boy!' he groaned; and these were his last words. Since that day, God helping me, I have never touched a drop of liquor. But I know my weakness. I don't dare to expose myself to the temptation, and I never knowingly go where liquor is used. This morning, while the provision wagon was being loaded, I saw that some one had sent along a case of whisky. Forgive me, boys, I'm not preaching, nor finding fault with you; but you see now why I can't go."

"You can and you shall go," spoke up the judge, who had provided the case of liquor, "for the whisky is going to stay here." So the lawyer went, and a jollier, happier outing none of the men ever had.—Youth's Companion.

A "Dry" Business.

As a reformed drinker was telling his life story at an open-air meeting—telling of his own transformation and the blessings that had come to him through total abstinence—he was interrupted by a shabby, half-tipsy man.

"Away, man, it's a dry business year teetotal," was his first exclamation.

"It's all that, friend," retorted the speaker.

"When I was like you, down at the heel and out at the elbow, banking my money with the publican, I had scarcely a pair of boots to my feet, and suffered from much cold and wet. Now, since I gave up drink, I'm never without two pairs of boots, both watertight. Yes, man, it's a dry business, teetotal.

"But more, friend, when I was in the 'wet' brigade, I had only one coat, and a poor thing at that. Now I have several, and a waterproof and an umbrella into the bargain. So that instead of being at the mercy of the elements I can walk abroad in the hardest rain without discomfort. Yes, it's a dry business, teetotal!

"That's not all. When I was drinking I was an outcast without a copper to rub against another, without a home, and sometimes without a roof overhead, save the open sky. Now I have a goodly home, and not a few comforts, not to speak of something for a 'rainy' day. Yes, it's a dry business, teetotal!"—The Vanguard.

Temperance and Insurance.

Professor Scanlon, at the assembly, gave figures to show that, on an average, total abstainers die at 64, tipplers at 51 and regular drinkers at 35. Why should those who have a reasonable expectation of living to be old pay as much for insurance as those who are likely to die young? There is certainly a difference in the risks. The report of the standing committee said: "For this reason we ask the life insurance companies to place drinkers and abstainers in separate classes. There is no reason why total abstainers of this country should help to pay risks of drinkers. Because total abstinence decreases the number of lapses, we ask the insurance companies to make this division."

Bar and Bottle Law.

The bar and bottle bill of Massachusetts is now operative. Under its provisions bottle liquor can not be sold in bulk in places where drinks are served over the bar. An ordinary bar business requires a first-class license. The right to sell bottled goods is given in the fourth-class license. One man or firm must have both licenses, but the different branches of the business must be conducted in separate stores, each store having its own separate entrance. The first day the law became operative, ten liquor dealers, some of whom were engaged in the business for half a century, closed their doors for good.

Not My Business.

A wealthy man in St. Louis was asked to aid in a series of temperance meetings, but he scornfully refused. After being further pressed, he said:

"Gentlemen, it is not my business."

A few days after, his wife and two daughters were coming home in the lightning express. In his grand carriage, with liveried attendants, he rode to the depot, thinking of his splendid business, and planning for the morrow. Hark! did some one say "Accident?" There are twenty-five railroads centering in St. Louis. If there has been an accident it is not likely it has happened on the ——— and Mississippi railroad. Yet it troubles him. "It is his business" now. The horses are stopped on the instant, and upon inquiring he finds it has occurred twenty-five miles distant, on the ——— and Mississippi. He telegraphs to the superintendent:

"I will give you $500 for an extra engine."

The answer flashes back, "No."

"I will give you $1,000 for an engine."

"A train with surgeons and nurses has already gone forward, and we have no other."

With white face and anxious brow, the man paced the station to and fro. That is his business now. In half an hour, perhaps, which seemed to him half a century, the train arrived. He hurried towards it, and in the tender found the mangled and lifeless remains of his wife and one of his daughters. In the car following lay his other daughter, with her dainty ribs crushed in, and her precious life oozing slowly away.

A quart of whisky, which was drank fifty miles away, by a railroad employe, was the cause of the catastrophe.

Who dares say of this tremendous question, "It is not my business?"—Unknown.

Trifling With Danger.

I was sitting at the table of an Irish merchant in Sligo a few years ago. He had eight beautiful children. He had his wines and brandy on the table, and of course asked me to drink, and I had to give my reasons for declining. This gave me an opportunity to put in a little temperance, and while I was making my little speech by way of apology, I made this remark: "I would like to see the man who could truthfully say, 'No relative or friend of mine ever fell through intemperance.'" I saw that this had struck him: his knife and fork fell from his grasp, and he remained silent for some seconds.

"Well," said he at length, "I am not that man. My first Sunday school superintendent was a man of genial spirit and noble mein. He went into the wine trade, and died a drunkard before he was forty. My first class leader, I believe, was a good, intelligent, useful man; but he, too, yielded to the habit of intemperance, and died a drunkard. My own father suffered through intemperance."

"Yes," I exclaimed, "and you yourself are parading before your friends and your children the instruments of death which slew your first Sunday school superintendent, your first class leader, and your father. The very rope with which they were hung you are adjusting to catch your children. I can not afford to put my head in such a halter as that."—W. Taylor.

Only One Side.

The worst way to sell liquor, to buy it or drink it, is at the open, well-regulated saloon. The next worse way to buy or sell or drink liquor, is at the blind tiger. The next worst way is at the dispensary. The next worst way to the dispensary is the little dispensed at home where the liquors are bought from far-away dealers and dispensed by the owner to his friends. There is no good way to buy it, sell it or use it. The choice is between the worst ways, for the community and the individual. An evil has no good side.—Birmingham Ledger.

Do Your Cooking in the Cool

A hot kitchen is little better than a prison in summer. But the range is there, so all the cooking and the washing must be done there, too.

What a relief it would be to move the range where you pleased. You can do this with a New Perfection Oil Cook-stove—cook your dinner out on the porch, if you like. It is the only range that is really portable—that works equally well in any place. There are no connections to be made, as in a gas range; no wiring, as with an electric stove; no sooty flues and ash-filled grates, as with coal or wood.

The long, enameled chimneys carry the heat directly up to saucepans, oven or boiler; you get full value from your fuel, without waste.

New Perfection Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-stove

Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners, with long, turquoise blue enameled chimneys. Handsomely finished throughout. The 2- and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without a cabinet top, which is fitted with drop shelves, towel racks, etc.

Dealers everywhere; or write for descriptive circular to the nearest agency of the

SAGE TEA, USED BY OUR GRANDMOTHERS TO DARKEN THE HAIR

Restores Gray Hair to Natural Color, Stops It from Coming Out and Makes It Grow.

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the vision of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and color restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

This remedy is sold under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

THE LOCAL UNION.

Another Trolley Party Being Arranged Society News.

The executive committee of the local Christian Endeavor union, at its meeting at Robinson park last Tuesday evening, voted to plan for another trolley party for the societies of the city in the very near future. It is hoped to have the affair not later than the latter part of July. The great success of the trolley party held Friday, June 23, was responsible for this decision. Arrangements will be made to accommodate a crowd even larger than that of last Friday, when 140 crowded the special car.

The next union open air service inaugurated at Lawton park the third Sunday in June, will be held at Swinney park on Sunday, July 15. The meeting will be held at 5 o'clock and a speaker of prominence in the local work will be asked to deliver the address.

The executive committee's meeting at Robison park last Tuesday evening will be the last until September 26.

The society of Grace Reformed church will hold its regular July business and social meeting on Thursday evening, July 6, at the home of Mrs. Harry Stuart, in Lakeside. A very pleasant evening is anticipated and a large attendance is hoped for.

Mr. H. C. Bradley will lead the meeting next Sunday evening at the West Jefferson Street Church of Christ, and Miss Alice Saffen will be the leader at the Grace Reformed church.

SCHLATTER'S ORCHESTRA

Gave Concert at New Haven to Large Audience.

The Schlatter's Orchestra, of this city, assisted by the choir of the Fort Wayne First M. E. church, gave a concert at New Haven during the week and the New Haven Herald has the following complimentary notice concerning the entertainment:

The musical program given last Thursday evening at the Methodist Episcopal church by C. C. Schlatter's orchestra assisted by the choir of the First M. E. church of Fort Wayne, was largely attended and all who were present enjoyed a musical treat. The pastor, Rev. M. M. Thornburg, was more than pleased with the large audience and thinks that later in the fall, he may be able to have the same organization return and render a similar program. Mr. C. C. Schlatter, the hardware man of Fort Wayne and owner of the orchestra, and Mr. O. E. Richard, the able conductor, expressed themselves as being highly gratified with the splendid audience given them. The entire orchestra and choir are to be highly complimented upon the excellent talent displayed.

Cigar of quality, Cresto.

M. Vedrines, in his flight to Madrid, passed near a chain of lakes which few tourists have visited. The Desert de Carlitte, in the Pyrenees, close on 10,000 feet above the sea, contains no less than sixty lakes of varying sizes. These, according to local tradition, were left at the time of the flood. When the waters subsided it appears that Noah and his family landed on the Puy de Prigue, one of the highest peaks in the district. Convincing proof of the truth of this tradition is found in an iron ring to which, the peasants declare, the ark was moored when the landing was effected.—London Chronicle.

MAN SHYS AT UNKNOWN FOOD.

Likes to Know at Least Under What Category it Is Listed.

(Washington Post.)

Man is apt to shy at the unknown dish, it matters not how attractively presented, for the male mind is a catalogued affair, neatly arranged, and things come in the various courses of a dinner that cannot be found instantly in the catalogue.

Not many years ago the late Chief Justice Fuller looked askance at a creation thrust between his left shoulder and the white arm of his dinner mate. He hesitated, readjusted his glasses, and saw it was fearfully and wonderfully made. His hostess saw the doubt and inclined toward him reassuringly:

"Don't mind it, Chief Justice; it's nothing but ham—just ham."

With evident relief he cut into the revealed mystery.

"Thank you," he said; "I like ham, but how was I to know that it was ham?"

General Grosvenor, for many years a familiar figure in the house, and dubbed Santa Claus by the gallery, was dining formally at the home of a colleague. The day had been hard, he was hungry, and he devoted himself to his dinner. Suddenly he turned to the woman on his left.

"What am I eating?" he asked.

She couldn't tell him, and he appealed to his right hand.

"What am I eating?" he repeated.

"Oh, just some arrangement of fish," she explained, cheerfully.

"To think of that being fish!" he said, incredulous, but satisfied.

SOCIETY

June and her weddings which have exceeded in number that of any preceding month in this city, have passed. Now comes the getting way for a holiday, the house party at a nearby lake, the picnic party in park or at some country point, and the infrequent porch party, but society generally speaking is taking a rest.

Mrs. Joseph A. Berghoff gave the third of a series of small porch parties this afternoon, entertaining this time a number of her older friends at bridge. Mrs. Dan Bash, of Indianapolis, was the only guest from out of town, present. There were jardinlers of garden flowers and delicious refreshments to contribute to the pleasure of the company.

Misses Mildred and Ruth Flick entertained an informal gathering of young ladies on the roomy porch of the Flick home yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Edwina McGlennon, of Kalamazoo, Mich., who is visiting Miss Agnes Cunningham. The porch was beautifully decorated with hanging baskets, pots of blooming plants and jardinieres of flowers. Fantan proved an interesting game and cool and tempting refreshments were served the guests by Miss Marguerite, Miss Alice and Master George Flick. Old fashioned games were played on the lawn a part of the time.

The parts in the play called "Snow Drop" were taken by Florence Graffe, Lucy King, Herman Viberg, Mary Cunningham, Justin Beuret, Katherine Cunningham, Bernice Johnson, Roscoe O'Bren, Edward Cunningham. Miss Ruth Lanternier recited several selections. Miss Adelia Beuret presided at the bowl of lemonade. Some day the coming week the same company will picnic at Robison park with Mrs. Graffe as chaperon.

Bicknell—Quick.

Mr. Scott C. Bicknell, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Bicknell, of Washington, and a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Bicknell, of this city was married in Indianapolis on Thursday evening to Miss Katherine Quick, daughter of Mr. Walter J. Quick, of Roanoke, Va. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Z. T. Sweeney, of Columbus, an old family friend in the presence of relatives and a few friends. Miss Ruth Bicknell, of this city, was one of the bridesmaids, and other attendants were Miss Elizabeth Secord, maid of honor, and Miss Margaret Quick, of Chicago. Mr. Bicknell, the bridegroom, was attended by Mr. Frank Novak, who was best man and Mr. Harold Wood, both of Chicago, and by Mr. Austin T. Quick, jr., of Lynchburg. Two young brothers of the bride, Walter and Mitchell Quick, carried standards of shasta daisies and another small brother, Burnett Quick, was dressed as Cupid and carried a bow and arrow. The bride was in a gown of ivory satin with court train and made with trimmings of princess lace and she wore a veil held with orange blossoms and carried bride roses and lilies of the valley tied with gauze ribbon. Miss Ruth Bicknell wore a pale blue marquisette over silk and carried forget-me-nots. Misses Margaret and Winifred Bicknell of this city, were among the wedding guests. The bride and groom have gone on a trip to northern lakes and will be at home in this city after the first of September. Mr. Bicknell has spent several summers here during which time he has been connected with the editorial department of the Daily News.

Ziegler-Lopshire.

The Peru Chronicle gives the following account of the wedding of a Fort Wayne young man in its issue of June 28:

"The marriage of Mr. Rush Ziegler and Miss Ethel May Lopshire was solemnized by Rev. O. B. Kessinger at the United Brethren parsonage this morning, at 10 o'clock. The groom is a resident of Fort Wayne and the bride formerly resided there. Miss Lopshire will be remembered as the young lady who charmed her listeners with her sweet voice as she sang for revival services last winter. The bride and groom are excellent young people and have the best wishes of a host of friends here and at Fort Wayne, where they will reside. Mrs. Ziegler will be remembered by many as Miss Ellison, as that is her step-father's name."

Rules of Etiquette.

After the guests have arrived at a wedding reception ushers may find their own particular friends, take them to the dining room and escort them about the house.

One of the first duties of the best man at a wedding is to select some pretty and appropriate gift for the bride. Before making the selection he learns, if possible, just what she would be certain to like and sends the gift as soon after the invitations are out as possible.

At a dance nothing is more discourteous than for a man to claim his partner several minutes after the music has begun. He should learn who his partner is for the next dance during the preceding intermission and excuse himself in time to claim the dance as soon as the music begins.

When a woman wishes to signify the day she is prepared to receive calls, she has "Tuesday," "Thursday" or what ever day is selected engraved in the lower left hand corner of her visiting cards. This conveys the intention without further explanation.

When dining alone in a hotel a woman of refinement does not order wine. Neither should she choose a conspicuous position in the room.

In sending out invitations for children's parties, if Mrs. B., mother of the little host or hostess, is unacquainted with Mrs. C., mother of a desired guest, Mrs. B. may write a note to Mrs. C. verifying the invitation sent by her child, whereupon Mrs. C. should send a courteous response.

COMPLIMENTS BAILHE TRIO.

Well Known Musicians Receive High Praise at Shelbyville Concert.

The Bailhe trio, players of chamber music, of whose members two are identified with the European School of Music, this city, went to Shelbyville to give a concert before the Indiana State Music Teachers' association, which convened there four days this week, and received high praise from a critical audience. The trio has given two concerts in Fort Wayne and will be heard before the Country club and invited guests this evening. Mr. Bailhe is the director and manager of the European School of Music, which closes its year's work this week, but he will be here teaching during the summer, and Mrs. B. W. Rhamy, an assistant piano teacher, will also keep her studio open for pupils. Of the concert at Shelbyville the Indianapolis Star says:

"The evening concert was given by the Bailhe trio—George Bailhe, pianist; Maurinus Paulsen, violinist, and Leroy Schwab, 'cellist, and Nevada Van der Veer, contralto, of New York. This concert was one of the most classical of all the programs and from a musical standpoint its educational value will be far-reaching. The trio plays with a wonderfully accurate ensemble and their work displays an intellectual comprehension of their subject which is not exceeded by many more famous organizations of its kind."

Another complimentary notice given by the News of Indianapolis spoke of the trio as composed of "men who are finished musicians and their ensemble was of superior merit." The Shelbyville Morning News referred to the same concert as one of the most delightful ever given in that city.

WOMAN'S LEAGUE LECTURES.

University Extension Course Arranged for Coming Winter at Usual Prices.

Plans for the next season of university extension lecture course have already been completed by the committee. As usual, these lectures will be given under the auspices of the Woman's league, six for $1.50. Prof. S. H. Clark, of Chicago university, whose reading of Rostand's "Chantecler" was one of the treats of the past winter, has been engaged for the entire course. The lectures will be a series under the general title, "The Salvation and Tragedies of Life," but the specialties will be a study of six standard novels. The dates of the lectures and their topics will be as follows

Nov. 2—"Salvation Through Service," based on George Eliot's "Silas Mariner."

Nov. 16—"Salvation Through Love," based on Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables."

Dec. 7—"Salvation Through Suffering," based on Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter."

Jan 4—"A Tragedy of Thrift," based on Balzac's "Eugenie Grandet."

Jan. 18—"A Tragedy of Fathe-hood," based on George Meredith's "Richard Feverel."

The Spirit of Today.

Nobody can deny that the spirit of rebellion is very lively in this generation. To every kind of restraint or law the severest criticism is applied. A great many people are like children who peep at forbidden fruit over a wall, wondering why they may not eat it, yet afraid of unknown consequences. Perhaps if they mustered up sufficient courage to do so, they would learn why they might not and be silent in future. Thus the family is undergoing a very severe attack because the claims of the old on the young are declared to be cruel and exorbitant, an unnatural check on the ardor of youth. But in spite of all this the stability of the family as a part of society seems hardly affected because the substitutes suggested for it are so much worse.

At the heart of the home—a Packard Piano or Interpreter

It can scarcely be a home without a good piano now-a-days. If you are a musician and want to get the most for your piano dollars, you will, of course, want the Packard piano. If you do not happen to be a pianist and want all the fun of playing, you will find that the Packard Interpreting piano is the ideal instrument for you. Either of them you can buy just now at interesting prices—and on the most liberal terms

Why not exchange the old piano for a Packard Interpreter?

A WORD TO WOMEN.

The always tired and always sick women are among domestic discards and are so rated in the minds of most men. Love is long suffering when it is real, but the man does not exist who can hear a never-ending string of complaints and imaginary illnesses without a sort of emotional revolution. Eventually he becomes so wearied by the whinings and tearful tales of suffering that he reaches the deadly milestone of indifference. From that point marriage ceases to become a sacrament and evolves into a state of commonplace certainty best designated as habit.

Unfortunately there are a great many tired and sick women in the world, because women who lead a shut-in and aimless life easily drift into mental weariness. It is a curious fact that the mother of six healthy children with omniverous appetites and ungovernable tendencies for tearing the knees out of stockings, is never half so tired as her sister who spends the entire days waiting for evening to come.

Granting the presence of these feelings of illness and fatigue, just what does a woman gain by constantly voicing them? Certainly giving verbal expression to pain in no way aleviates it. Rather does it add a sharp edge to the sting by giving it undue importance. It creates an atmosphere of uneasiness, and makes a man feel that he is not doing his best for the comfort and happiness of the woman he has vowed to care for to the utmost of his ability. He fears to add to her burdens by dragging her away on pleasure jaunts, so he goes with some congenial friends.

Finally he forms the habit of going alone, and some fine day the complainer awakens to the fact that she is complaining to deaf ears. The beginning of the end is in sight, and though the wife weeps and rends her garments, the real tears are in vain, for she has shed so many foolish ones that those from the heart have lost their value.

Huckleberry Cake.

Rub together one quart of flour, three tablespoonfuls of butter and two-thirds of a teaspoonful of salt. Beat three eggs well together, add a cupful of milk and stir into the dry mixture, adding more milk, if needed, to make a very thick drop batter. Stir in one pint of huckleberries, which have been picked over, washed and well drained. Lastly, add three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and pour into a shallow, well buttered pan. Bake in a quick oven. Split, butter and serve hot, passing cream with it.

Cherry Cornstarch.

Wash and pit a quart of cherries; put the pits in a saucepan with a quart of water, heat slowly and simmer for ten minutes, strain and return the water to the fire, adding, if the cherries are sweet, a half cupful of sugar; twice as much if sour. Wet four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with a little cold water, add to the boiling liquid and stir and cook for ten minutes. Put the cherries in the dish in which they are to be served. Take the cooked cornstarch from the fire, add the strained juice of one lemon and a pinch of salt; when slightly cooled pour it over the cherries. Serve this very cold with cream.

CONVENIENT FOR THE SUMMER HOME.

Two convenient and pretty trifles in the summer home are illustrated. One is a ribbon holder for the whisk broom, which is thus kept in its place and ready at hand when needed. The other is an odd shaped pin cushion. Any woman who is at all clever with her needle can easily copy either one of these trifles. The brush holder is made from two round pieces of cardboard covered with silk, and held together with ribbons.

POWDER PUFFS.

Camphor water applied to the nose with a soft cloth at intervals will reduce the pores of the skin.

Persons not susceptible to colds should try walking briskly in the rain without an umbrella as a tonic for the complexion.

Equal portions of pure rice powder and some one of the favorite French face powders make a delicate and effectual filling for the powder box of the woman who cannot always always afford the French brands.

The teeth should be brushed thoroughly with a reliable powder or paste in the morning and lightly after each meal. Plain water may be used after the meals.

A cup of hot water in which has been dissolved a half teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda will sometimes relieve a hot weather headache.

A deliciously spicy toilet water is made by putting a half a pint of rectified spirits with a half an ounce of oil of pink, shaking the mixture for several minutes, corking well and putting away for several weeks to bring out the scent.

The best results in bathing are obtained by the use of tepid water. Cold water is not cleansing, and hot water is weakening. A rinse of colder temperature should never be omitted.

A Page of Interest to Women

WOMEN WHO EARN A LIVING

Work as a curative for the imaginary ills of the chronic complainer is recognized not only by physicians, but by families and friends to whom the pains have been constantly voiced. Girls or women with a sick brain are always locating the sickness somewhere in their bodies and thrusting long detailed accounts of their sufferings upon whomsoever will lend an ear. They are pessimistic, full of doubts and despair, critical and have an ax always ready to be ground.

When such a woman becomes interested in her work, these phantom ills disappear as the clouds before the sun. A busy mind has neither time nor place for false theories of self. It is too much occupied unveiling the truth of things to fill the precious space with error. Some fine morning the woman who once filled the air about her with complainings will wake up to find her headaches, her nervous chills, her pains in the side, in the back and across the chest vanished into thin air. When she looks about for their cure she will be brought face to face with her work, and she will bless it at a true salvation.

In many cases the pains of the complainer are very real. This does not lessen the alleviating force of work. Even real pains, when dwelt upon constantly, become more and more acute, while if they are forgotten their sting is greatly lessened. Cases are numerous wherein invalids have responded to the work tonic with regained strength and creative ability. It never fails to improve a soured disposition or a fault-finding nature. Do not say you are not strong enough to work. Effort, rightly directed, is a magic healer, and may succeed where medicine and doctors have failed.

Any girl with a good education and a willingness to work may become a librarian. By good education is not meant higher education, though such mental equipment might militate in her favor. A good high school education is sufficient for the beginner. Since skilled librarians have entered into the list of professionals, schools for teaching the technical work connected with libraries have sprung into existence. The girl or woman who wishes to climb should enter such a school at the beginning of her career if possible, though there are summer terms in which she may learn this part of the work.

Graduating from high school at the age of eighteen, the student enters a school for librarians. Two courses are open to her—a one year term, in which she completes the framework and necessary knowledge, and a two-year term, in which she is rounded off and polished, with all the finer points at her command. Tuition in such schools range from $30 to $40 a month, being on duty on an average of seven hours a day. The average salary of a librarian is from $60 to $70 a month. Congress pays its librarian $6,000 a year, and several of the large libraries equal this sum. Assistants receive about half the salary of their superiors. An apprentice entering the work without preparation seldom receives more than $5 a week for her services.

Administrative ability is one of the principal requirements. The library worker must know how to catalogue books—in fact, she must be a good bookkeeper. She is responsible for all the literature under her care, must be able to locate any one of the hundreds of books when called upon to do so, must have a vast fund of general information and a willingness to serve cheerfully. An accurate memory is also important, the constant contact with hundreds of names cultivating this faculty and often bringing it to marvelous development.

In the smaller towns and cities girls sometimes enter the library from high school as assistants, and for a time give their services free of charge in order to learn the work. When a vacancy occurs their names are put on the pay roll and by efficiency and the invariable law of change they advance, step by step, to the office of chief librarian. For some undefined reason this branch of endeavor is taken as a diversion rather than a livelihood, and is not frowned upon by the self-elected who look upon work in the light of social oblivion. Perhaps it is because the literary atmosphere commands their respect, or because they associate the library worker with the vast lore resting upon the shelves, but the fine distinction remains. The environment is certainly agreeable and the reading public are, as a rule, easy to meet and reasonable in their demands.

The library school of the New York public library consists of four rooms in the library building, at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. An entrance examination in which the general information of the candidate is tested consists of questions in literature, current events, general information, French and German. The tuition is $15 per term for three terms for the first year or general course. For applicants without the metropolitan district it is $25 a term, payable in advance. Cost of supplies and text books aggregates $30. The second year course is chiefly one of paid practice in the library, with courses of lectures for which no fee is asked. A list of safe and respectable boarding houses known to the faculty is sent to each accepted applicant whose home is not in the city. For the benefit of those aspirants who do not know French and German it is well to know that few of the smaller libraries require a student of the languages.

"Should the woman who desires to become a library worker have a great love of books?" was asked the chief librarian in one of the city's large libraries.

"Must a bookkeeper have a natural love for figures?" was the reply. "I have a dozen applicants a day who tell me of their great love of books, their acquaintance with all the classics and their omniverous reading propensities. They seem to think this is the sole qualification for the reading position. System is the big word in a library. Without system there could be no library. There must be a plenty of patience, cheeriness, willingness. Like all other professions, a good, solid education is the proper foundation upon which to build. Good librarians are needed, just as good workers are needed in all fields. There are plenty of the mediocre sort, but if a girl or woman wishes to enter the work with a determination to reach success by the short, easy road, she had better try some other field. Likewise the right woman would find the office of librarian pleasant as well as profitable."

ATHLETIC OUTFITS FOR THE SPORTING GIRL

The outfit for the athletic girl is of the utmost importance during the summer season, for it is during the warm months that she is most active. Pictured are a comfortable costume for fishing, a boating outfit which will stand wear and look well at the same time, and a smart bathing suit for the girl who includes swimming among her accomplishments.

Rules of Etiquette.

Arrive at the theater a few minutes before the rise of the curtain. If this is not possible, remain in the foyer until such time as the seats may be reached without disturbing the performers and those about you. This is an unequivocal mark of the person of thoughtfulness and good breeding.

A woman should slip off her wrap in the foyer of the theater, carrying it on her arm down the aisle.

In entering the theater the lady precedes the man past the ticket taker. He then secures the programs, gives the usher his coupons and follows the lady down the aisle.

When a man and woman acquaintance meet, the woman bows first, the proper greeting being a slight bow of the head, accompanied by a direct glance and a pleasant smile.

A NEW CAKE RULE.

If you wish to have soft, fluffy, light and moist cakes, follow this rule: Never beat the eggs, add the unbeaten yolks to the creamed butter and sugar, ad dthe whites after all the other ingredients have been added, just stirring enough to mix well with the batter. This is against all established rules of cake making, but after one trial the doubter is convinced.

HOW TO TREAT A WIFE.

TOLD BY A KNOWING HUSBAND.

"If a lot of worthy husbands want to hand out to their better halves some domestic happiness which won't cost them anything except a few kind words," suggested the knowing husband as he adjusted Ruth's evening coat, "they will notice that their wife's new dress or latest purchase in millinery is mighty becoming, and they will mention the fact to her in a few well chosen words.

"I have known lots of fellows who could tell you their sweetheart's costume down to the last pin, but after the sweetheart had evolved into the nearer and dearer relation of wife they couldn't name the color of a single dress in her wardrobe, not if their whole business and personal salvation depended upon the answer. Ruth says there is a certain woman of our acquaintance who simply craves the admiration and attention of her husband. He used to be very lavish in his praise of her clothes, her mannerisms, her beauty. She possesses a marvelous contralto voice. In courting days her husband actually raved about her singing, knew the name of every song on her list and sat for hours alternately dreaming and going into ecstacies over her music. He still sits for hours, for he has an inborn love for music that seems insatiable. At the end of the hours he rouses himself with the remark that it must be about time to 'turn in' or that 'a bit of something to eat wouldn't be bad.'

"Ruth has known that wistful wife to spend days concocting a dainty fur below for her throat or a becoming hat, in the hope of attracting his attention and eking out a world of admiration, only to have her efforts passed by unnoticed. Once she heard him say that he liked to see women wear white, whereupon she flooded her wardrobe with billows of white. It evoked not a single remark from the self-centered man, who took the personal appearance of his wife for granted.

"Flattery is very dear to the heart of woman," continued the knowing husband, "even after she has passed the marriage milestone. I have reason to believe it is vastly more mellifluent to the ear of the matron than the maid, because in these days of rapid progress and Renos a woman is never quite sure—and, anyway, assurance is doubly sweet when it comes from the one man.

"I'd like to hand a little tip to the husbands who can't see their wives except with the eye of the commonplace: Leave your business cares and worries locked up behind the door of your office or shop, and if the woman who cares for your home and for you looks particularly well when you come in to dinner, if her hair is becomingly done or her dress unusually attractive, don't be above the pretty attention of telling her so. A little compliment goes a long way in keeping the home atmosphere clear."

SIMPLE LOTIONS FOR THE HANDS

Pure soap is one of the secrets of well kept hands. Drying the hands thoroughly after washing them is another important point to be observed, and if either of these are neglected no amount of lotions will bring about the desired result.

Different skins demand different soaps. The glycerine varieties are particularly good. The best way to determine the value of a soap is to give it a trial and if the skin is soft and smooth after the bath so that the whole hand feels pliable and refreshed, it is safe to continue its use.

Be careful to push the cuticle back from the nails after every hand bath, be it dozens of times a day. If warm water is used have a bottle filled with a lotion composed of benzoin, glycerine and rosewater; tip the bottle in the palm of the hand and rub the lotion into the skin before the hands are thoroughly dry. This is a splendid suggestion for the housewife whose hands are subjected to different solutions in the course of her work. She should have a bottle always handy and use it generously. As a result her hands will be white and plump and will not bear the telltale marks of age or work. Any reputable druggist understands the proportions in which these ingredients should be used.

Another benefit of the glycerine and benzion lotion is its tendency to make the palms of the hands and the tips of the fingers that delicate pink affected by the professional beauty. It also keeps the nails in good condition by softening their texture, causing them to take on a becoming polish and keeping the cuticle from becoming ragged, thus preventing hangnails.

One Way of Winning Success

The habit of judging present intentions by past mistakes is one of the blights to success largely practiced by women. Having experienced or witnessed one unhappy ending to endeavor, woman is prone to tread with wary feet or even to make no incursions into uncertain fields.

It is a well known fact that women are very bad losers. A case is recorded recently wherein a woman who played a wonderful hand at bridge, winning consistently, suddenly experienced a run of bad luck. Now every card player knows that is but one of the little whims concocted by fortune to make play more interesting. The woman could not see fortune's frown in that light. Instead of laughing in the face of luck and going in to show what a slender chance fortune really had against her skill, she went to her home and took the revolver route out of her financial embarrassments.

Equally peculiar in the aspect of reason is the fact that in the big issues of life women are undaunted by any discouragements, even though they are seemingly colossal in import. Yet at the first sign of petty failure she loses heart, voicing her fears in warnings and examples. Lack of initiative is one of the prime factors holding her back in her progress both as a wage-earner and a home-maker. She is afraid to try because she may fail, forgetful of the fact that the chances for success are equally bright.

There are mothers who are anxious to teach their daughters how to cook and do plain sewing. They purchase material, buy a pattern and explain the rudiments of the making. Then, because the first effort falls, they take it for granted sewing is not one of the accomplishments to be achieved by the daughter, when in truth she might, with very little experience, develop into a neat little woman. By the same token mothers who learned to cook in the valuable school of experience will "shoo" their daughters out of the kitchen on the strength of a soggy pan of biscuits or a tasteless, fallen cake. There is a knack to cooking no amount of instruction can convey, a fact many mothers are apt to totally ignore.

Wives often discourage their husbands by citing past failures in business indeavor. Nothing so dampens the ardor and ambition of a man as to be brought face to face with the skeletons of his own failures. He loses hope, and we all know that hope is half of the battle of life. Calm useless fears! Send the worker forth into the field with a positive, determined attitude and his chances of success are multiplied.

Above all, do not be guided by your own failures. Looking behind is a poor policy, leading to vain regrets beginning nowhere and ending the same place. It means the loss of much valuable time that could be used to advantage in traveling the untrodden way. "Remember, now," and "I told you so" are phrases to be eliminated from the vocabulary of the tactful woman. Pleasant places are often reached through paths of arid waste scattered with the debris of experience.

RESTING WHILE WORKING.

Many housewives tire themselves almost toexhausting, when if they had a rocking chair in the kitchen a multitude of small matters, which do not require standing on the feet, could be done. Of course, the rocker need not be of an expensive kind so long as it gives comfort. Where the kitchen allows of it a couch could be placed there for the comfort of the housewife. She can rest on this while she waits for the roast to get done or for the slow fire to bring the soup pot to a boil.

CHARMING NEGLIGEES FOR THE COUNTRY HOUSE

FROM GIMBEL BROS. FROM FRANKLIN SIMON & CO.

The woman who makes a round of country house visits in summer time must be prepared not only for out-door sports and dinner and evening festivities, but must have with her also a supply of ravishing boudoir gowns for the cosey chats and morning bridge games which take place in the private sitting rooms above stairs. The pink chiffon boudoir gown, with fichu drapery over the shoulder, is particularly graceful, and this gown is matched by a distracting cap of pleated lace and pink ribbon. A more elaborate negligee is made of thin, pale blue messaline veiled with pale blue net, on which are scattered clusters of blurred pink rosebuds, this net forming a crossed fichu drapery over the shoulders and a deep tunic drapery on the skirt, a white lace scarf being draped across the front of the gown.

With the negligee now a dainty coiffure cap is invariably worn and this fad has its practical side, for under the dainty cap the hair may be loosely and simply arranged, without the puffs, curls and braids which are injurious to the hair in warm weather when constantly worn.

TIMELY TIPS.

The fad for the sailor collar and its modifications has extended to the summer suit of linen, which shows broad collars and cuffs of pique. Sometimes coarse mesh linen lace edges these tailored collars, but more often they are plain, their plainness being the secret of their style. As they are very inexpensive, easily made at home and dress up a last summer suit into a modish little present day garment, they are certain to win a large number of followers.

One of the new conceits in Irish crochet is booties for the baby. They come in several sizes, with ribbon laces and tiny crochet buttons. A soft silk lining keeps the lace from contact with the tiny feet. Indulgent mothers are sure to want a pair of these handsome booties to go with baby's hand-made dresses.

The girl with an assortment of jabots and frills should study the colors most becoming to her, and fashion a number of odd tailor bows and knots of velvet and ribbon to pin at her throat as a sort of fastening for the neckwear. She will be surprised at the smart effect given by the touch of color. In this way a really plain suit will take on an individuality otherwise lacking, and the problem of change which looms so large on the dress horizon will be partially solved.

For the traveling suit a light wool material is best, as it neither musses nor soils like linen or relish. There are a number of these fabrics that do not hold the heat and have no appreciable weight. Polo and blanket coats are the smartest of traveling wraps when lined with a soft silk or satin, which permits of their being slipped on and off easily

The French Masters of Dressmaking Put Forth Some Marvellous Creations for the Coronation Season

The Paris couturiers have been outdoing all former efforts in gowns for the coronation season. Never have so many wonderful costumes been gathered in one place as London is seeing at the present moment. Two Parisian creations are pictured. One is a diamante gown of black satin opening over a petticoat of rhinestone embroidered black satin, veiled with chiffon, festoons of yellow silk roses catching the two materials at the foot. The bodice is of rhinestone embroidered chiffon. This is a stunning gown for an older matron. A more youthful effect is shown in the other creation. It is of coronation purple satin and white lace, the scarf drapery on the bodice being weighted with pearl ornaments.

MADE BY THE BIGELOW CARPET CO.

This firm was recently awarded a large contract by the United States Treasury Department for supplying Rugs for the Federal Building, after a careful analysis of fabrics offered by other manufacturers in competition at a price much higher than any other bidder purely on SUPERIORITY AND QUALITY.

This decision endorses these goods as being the best of the kind made. This standard of quality is the same that has been used for over 50 years, and is still maintained.

Attention is also called to the fact that Bigelow Wilton is in real service in the United State House of Representatives, and over 400 Bigelow Wilton Rugs are in the office building of the House of Representatives at Washington, where they are giving the most perfect satisfaction. These fine quality of rugs will be sold for the next 10 days at the following reduced prices:

THE REAL FREIGHT RATE REGULATOR

(Contributed.)

The "barge canals" of the state of New York are now rapidly nearing completion.

When these canals are open for navigation, another chapter will have to be written in the records which immortalized Governor DeWitt Clinton—the man to whose foresight, courage and perseverance we are indebted for the first all water connection between Lake Erie and the Hudson, known as the "Erie canal."

Inadequate as the present canal is, with its mule-hauled two hundred and forty ton boats, that take about ten days to cover the five hundred miles from Buffalo to New York, it fixed the rate on all low classed freight between these two points, until the passage of the act, authorizing the construction of the new canals and its ratification by the people, when both the canal and the boats plying thereon were allowed to drift into a state of inefficiency. Under the prevailing impression that the new canal would be constructed in far less time than it has taken.

When the magnitude of the work is considered and the legal and other technical obstacles that had to be overcome, it will be seen how erroneous this impression was and it must be admitted by all fair minded men that the project has been pushed toward completion in an incredibly short space of time, reflecting great credit on those in charge.

Though the people of the state of New York assume the entire burden of the cost—which is $108,000,000—of reconstructing these canals and has recently enacted a law authorizing a bond issue of $19,150,000 more to equip them with modern up-to-date, mechanically equipped terminals, without which any transporation route, water or rail, is incomplete—these canals will be absolutely free to any vessels desirous of using them.

A nominal charge will, of course, be imposed on the users of the terminals, but as the law authorizing their acquisition and construction places them under the jurisdiction of the state, the state not being in the terminal business for profit, will base these charges on the necessary pro rata amount tributary to a sinking fund, which will redeem these fifty-year bonds on maturity, plus the interest thereon at 4 per cent, plus the cost of maintenance and operation, thus minimizing the charge for loading, discharging or trans-shipping.

These canals will be capable of accommodating vessels of 2,500 tons carrying capacity, provided, however, they are constructed to conform to the lockage dimensions—which is 310 in the clear by 45 by 12—and the height intervening between water level and the bridges—which are all fixed at a standard height of 15½ feet above water level, and they will also be as capable of navigating the Great Lakes as any existing craft plying thereon today.

The tonnage capacity of New York's barge canals is estimated by those qualified to pass judgment thereon to be equal to twenty-two millions of tons of east and west bound freight in a season of navigation not exceeding eight months.

This enormous tonnage could never take its rise at either extreme of the state of New York, for delivery within its own borders—hence to work it to its maximum capacity, it must be fed by freight coming east to the seaboard from points west of Buffalo, and the greater bulk of its westward-bound freight must be for delivery at the same sources which supply its eastward bound freight or points beyond.

These sources are the entire middle west, starting with the northern sections of Ohio and Indiana and thence to Chicago, which is the great entrepot, i. e., receiving and distributing center for the vast territory which lies beyond and whose commerce is naturally tributary thereto.

It is upon Chicago then that the canals of New York must depend for the major part of the vast volume of freight which her canals will be capable of carrying two years hence and Chicago will in turn be equally benefited not alone by the economy of shipping or receiving the freight destined for local distribution, but also in the economic enducements which she will be able to offer the shippers or receivers doing business in the territory lying west of her, to do their clearing through the port of Chicago rather than elsewhere.

But to do this effectively, to perfect the shortest and most economic route between Chicago and New York, another link is needed in the chain—one that will not only shorten the route to a fraction over a thousand miles—but will run through all the important commercial centers that intervene between these two points, and that link is the canal which will cut off the 400 miles detour around the Michigan peninsula, and is known as "The Toledo, Fort Wayne and Chicago Canal."

As this is the tri-state proposition, it would entail a series of political difficulties, if the three states interested, namely Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, were to undertake to assume proportionately the burden of the cost of construction, and so its promoters wisely decided to apply to the federal government.

Thanks to the impetus which has been given to the question of water borne transportation by the national rivers and harbors congress, their efforts so far have been crowned with success, and the preliminary investigations are now being made by the war department, under whose instruction, Lieutenant Cole, George A. Zinn and John Millis, the former stationed at Chicago and the latter at Cleveland are rapidly pushing their work to completion.

But these gentlemen are required only to investigate the physical possibilities of such a canal for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the government will be justified in the expenditure of the moneys necessary to defray the cost of an actual survey.

The essential thing, however—the crux of the whole proposition—is, whether or not the commercial advantages to be gained warrant the expenditures of any money either surveying the route or constructing such a canal.

This is what the commercial organizations, not only of the states through which the canal will pass but also of the states that would be indirectly benefited by its construction, must show to the U. S. Waterways commission of which Hon. Theodore Burton is chairman, upon their arrival along the proposed route some sixty days hence or sooner.

Every commercial organization along the proposed line, and at the termini thereof, has placed its seal of approval upon this canal and will naturally expect the co-operation of their fellow townsmen in their laudable efforts to secure a modernized means of water transportation, which will enable them to place the products of their farms, factories and mines in the markets of the world as economically as their alien rivals, with whom it is now an impossibility for them to compete on account of the higher freight charges that they are compelled to pay.

The problem of economic transportation is the most vital one remaining for the American people to solve. We have reduced the cost of production on all the necessities of life and most of its luxuries, but you cannot successfully compete with alien rivals in the world's markets unless you can reduce the transportation charges to the same basis that they enjoy and that can only be accomplished by adopting the same sensible tactics, resorted to by them, which is the utilization of their natural waterways, and the construction of artificial ones where they are proven to be profitable.

The following resolutions have been passed by the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Chicago Board of Trade, the Commercial club of Fort Wayne, Ind., the Toledo, Fort Wayne and Chicago Waterways association and every other commercial organization along the entire line is pledged to the support of the proposition.

RESOLVED, That the proposed "Michigan and Erie barge canal," now under investigation by the congressional commission and the board of U. S. army engineers—is a project of such commercial importance to the various cities along the suggested route as to warrant the co-operation of all the commercial interests in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, that they may thereby assure the construction of the aforesaid canal by the federal government at as early date as possible. Therefore, we heartily recommend the same.

It requires no prophet to predict that the territory directly affected by this waterway will in another decade be the greatest manufacturing center that the world has ever seen.

To illustrate, let us assume that a crescent moon had one of its horns resting on the east of Michigan City and the other on the town of Desplaines, the area from the lake bounded by the inner edge of this semi-circle will unquestionably be the center of these activities.

YOUR NEIGHBOR'S EXPERIENCE.

How you may profit by it. Take Foley Kidney Pills. Mr. T. J. T. Cummings, 607 E. Washington St., Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "For over two years I was troubled with a great weakness of the kidneys and bladder and with backaches. My kidney action was too frequent, especially at night, and I lost much sleep, which made me very nervous and restless. I was also troubled with dizzy spells, and the pain over my kidneys caused me intense misery at times. I tried Foley Kidney Pills and soon saw they were helping me wonderfully and I kept it up until I had used three bottles, which affected a complete cure. Dreier Drug Co.

WABASH ADVANCES SEVERAL MEN

Change Following Resignation of R. G. Thompson is Complete.

JOHN L. MILLER IS NIGHT TICKET MAN

Travel Eastward Over All Lines Will Be Heavy Next Week.

The changes arising from the resignation of Col. R. G. Thompson and the appointment of W. H. Shorey district passenger agent of the Wabash, which affected a half dozen men, were completed today. Each change was a promotion for the man affected, and was in line with the Wabash's policy of rewarding faithful employes. The Sentinel has already mentioned the promotion of Mr. Shorey to succeed Mr. Thompson and the advance of Ed Haas to day ticket agent. The changes made today are as follows. John L. Miller, night ticket agent, succeeding Mr. Haas; Arthur Helmke, car service clerk, succeeding Mr. Miller; J. Obenchain, night bill clerk at the freight office, succeeding Mr. Helmke; Arthur osse, night yard clerk, succeeding Mr. Obenchain, and Harry Miller succeeding Harry Patterson in the yard clerk's office. The latter has resigned. Fred Foster, a recent graduate of the International Business college, has taken the position of stenographer in the ticket office. He came from Mendon, Mich.

ROLLING MILLS TO CLOSE.

Plant Will Shut Down for a Week—Employes Plan Fishing Trips.

With the exception of a few machinists, the entire force of the Rolling mills will have a week's vacation beginning next Monday. The great plant is in need of numerous repairs and the management has decided upon extensive remodeling which will consume the entire week. Several hundred men will be laid off on account of the repairs, and most of the boys are anticipating hilarious outings and quests for the finny tribe.

Peter Krill, one of the head rollers, and his family, will enjoy the week's vacation at Crooked Lake, and Amuel Wink, head heater, with his family, have planned a delightful fishing trip ut an inland lake near Muskeegon, Mich.

TRYING TO GET BACK.

Former Pennsy Employes at Pitcairn Want Work.

About 500 men who worked in the Pitcairn shops of the Pennsylvania before the strike held a mass meeting in that place Thursday night and appointed a committee to confer with General Foreman J. F. Cousin in the effort to have them reinstated in the shops. They had been told that they could come back as new men, but that no man would be discharged to make room for them and the shop foreman says that at present there are no vacancies and that the work of the shop is well along and the time of those employed has been reduced from ten to eight hours per day. There are still 500 of the former employes who are out of the service and they have been ordered to turn in their transportation cards and told that if they attempted to use the passes the conductors would take them up and collect fare. It was also given out that the men who have been reinstated and those who will come in in the future must give up their passes and work five years before they can ride free, the same as new men are treated. They must work ten years before passes will be given to their wives.

HIS AGED MOTHER DEAD.

Master Car Builder J. A. Graham Hears Sad News.

James A. Graham, master car builder of the Pennsylvania, received a telegram at 5 o'clock this morning, conveying the news of the death of his mother, Mrs. Martha Graham, which occurred suddenly at her home in Emsworth, Pa., last night. Mrs. Graham was upwards of 80 years of age, but was in fairly good health a few days ago and news of her death came as a severe shock to her Fort Wayne relatives. She will be remembered by many of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Graham, whom she visited a few years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Graham, Miss Minnie Graham and Mr. and Mrs. Adam LaMar will leave on Pennsylvania train No. 24 tonight for Emsworth to attend the funeral.

HEAVY MOVEMENT EASTWARD.

The Shriners' and the Elks' conventions in the east will cause a very heavy passenger movement in that direction next week. The Christian Endeavor convention at Atlantic City will also draw a big delegation from the west. Next Wednesday the Pennsylvania will have two special trains of eight to ten cars each through the city, one carrying the Wisconsin delegation and the other the Minnesota delegation. Next Saturday the Pennsylvania will have three and possibly four special trains carrying Elks and their friends to Atlantic City through this city. One party comes from Portland, Oregon, another from Denver, Col., and the third from Chicago. The fourth, if it is necessary, will carry the Fort Wayne delegates and their friends. So far only fifty have signed up for the party, but the committee on transportation believes enough more will be secured to warrant a special train.

MOVING TO FLORIDA.

Mr. and Mrs. John Friedline, of East Washington street, and three of the members of their family, left at noon today for Laughman, Fla., where they will reside on a farm in the future. Mr. Friedline was employed at the City mills a number of years.

SECTION HAND HURT.

A most peculiar and almost fatal injury happened to Peter Elder, a section hand on the Pennsylvania, residing at Etna Green, Thursday afternoon. As westbound train No. 21 was passing the point where Mr. Elder was working at the rate of a mile a minute a piece of metal which became detached, flew off the engine, and struck him on the head, fracturing his skull and for awhile it was feared he could not survive. He is being attended by Dr. Dunfee, of Etna Green, and Dr. McDonald, of Warsaw, and they say he has a chance to recover.

WILL DEMOLISH OLD DEPOT.

John Danes, general foreman of carpenters on the Wabash, was here today to make arrangements for demolishing the frame building on Broadway which served the company as a depot during the time track elevation at Calhoun street was in progress. It is the intention to take the building down in sections, without destroying the material of which it is constructed.

GEORGE M'RAE PROMOTED.

Official circulars announce the promotion of George H. McRae, assistant general passenger agent of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railroad, a part of the Northwestern, to general passenger agent, succeeding T. W. Teasdale, resigned. He will retain his headquarters in St. Paul. E. L. Pardee, who has been traveling passenger agent, with headquarters in St. Paul, will be advanced to general passenger agent.

BEST IN HISTORY OF ROAD.

In the way of receipts from ticket sales the Fort Wayne ticket office of the Pennsylvania etsablished a new record for June. Agent J. E. Ross was not in position to give figures, but he said this morning that the receipts of the office during June were considerable above those of any previous month of his administration of affairs as local agent.

TOOK ON MORE MEN.

Six men found employment at the Wabash shops this morning. They were George B. Brothers, V. Jeme, T. Kozma, Walter Leach, C. C. Robertson and J. Emsch. Foreman Joseph Schwarzkopf, of the punch department, at the Electric works, also added some men to his force. Among them were A. H. Koenneman, Joseph T. Laboe, Charles Trautman and T. G. Dean.

DREDGEMEN TO GET OUTING.

The American Steel Dredge company has decided to close its plant Saturday evening and not resume work until next Wednesday. The company has had a steady growing business since it located in this city, and this is the first vacation of any length that the workmen have been treated to.

WILL CLOSE TWO DAYS.

The Bass Foundry and Machine works will be closed completely Monday and Tuesday, resuming operations Wednesday morning. The machine shop was closed today, but the foundry, the boiler shop, the pattern shop and the blacksmith shop were in operation.

THE DOLLAR SYSTEM POPULAR.

The G. R. & I. inaugurated the dollar three-day limit ticket sale to Rome City this morning and it promises to be the most popular move in that line ever made. Seventeen tickets were sold for train No. 7 this morning.

TURN OUT THIRTEEN ENGINES.

The output from the Pennsylvania erecting shop during the week ending today consisted of thirteen engines, all receiving heavy repairs. They were Nos. 7177, 7241, 7282, 7355, 7360, 7428, 7456, 7630, 7956, 9037, 9925, 9936 and 9948.

ABANDONED SANDUSKY.

The Big Four railway shops, now located at Sandusky and Delaware, will be closed and the work done at the big shops in Bellefontaine, Ohio, largely augmenting the force there. The plan has been contemplated for a long time.

WILL MAKE EASTERN TRIP.

A. A. Klotz and C. J. Getty, clerks in the Wabash freight office, will leave this evening on a ten days' trip in the east, which will include short stops at Niagara Falls and New York city.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Engineer B. F. Thompson, who was sick a week, resumed work on the Pennsylvania this morning.

Pasenger engine 613 was turned out of the Wabash shops this morning after receiving general repairs.

J. M. Zollars, E. Fenser, E. Law, F. J. Ruch and A. Gerardot, Pennsylvania shopmen, are sick and off duty.

Frank Rogers, engineer, and his fireman, J. J. Butler, of the Pennsylvania, have gone to the lake to stay a week.

Pennsylvania Engineer C. E. Enslen has taken a two weeks' lay off and will spend the time visiting out of the city.

C. O. and C. A. Bireley, shopmen, will occupy a cottage at Rome City next week. Their families will be with them.

Pennsylvania Engineer H. D. Rose, who has been at Tippecanoe lake with his family for a week, has reported for duty.

James N. Hamilton, of Mead & Hamilton, architects at Cleveland, is here to spend the Fourth with parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Hamilton.

Passenger Fireman C. J. Lapp, of the Pennsylvania, had an eye injured while out on his run Thursday night and will be unable to work for awhile.

Peter Carter, who made only two trips after being seriously ill, is again off duty on account of sickness, but it is said the present attack is not of a serious character.

James Trythall, a Pennsylvania blacksmith, left last night for New Castle, Pa., where he will spend a few days with his son, who resides in that city.

W. S. Slagle, Jr., Pennsylvania yard fireman, has taken a ten days' lay off, which he will spend at Chicago and later at one of the lakes in the northern part of this state.

A fishing party at Lake James next week will be composed of Engineers J. A. Mooney, O. W. Kruse and H. Simon. Engineer W. R. Crowell also left for the lakes today, expecting to stay ten days.

The Electro-Technic band will give a concert at "The Trail" park, near Lafayette, tomorrow afternoon. This will be one of the series of Sunday concerts for the Northern Indiana Traction company.

The Nickel Plate will carry the Shriners from Washington, Ore., and other western states from Chicago to Buffalo on their way to Rochester, N. Y. The train will pass through this city Sunday night, July 9.

The many requests for leave of absence on account of the Fourth has given some of the furloughed firemen opportunity to get in a few days work on the Pennsylvania. C. C. Erkelberry and J. J. Rosenberger are among them.

E. F. Needham, superintendent of motive power of the Wabash, left this afternoon for his home at Springfield, accompanied by Mrs. Needham, who had been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bell, in this city for several days.

The Nickel Plate last night handled the Forepaugh & Sells Brothers show from Green Springs to Loraine and tonight it will bring the show back to Bellevue, where it will be delivered to the Lake Shore and taken to Adrian, Mich.

Announcement comes from New York that the Erie will send out specifications shortly for 4,000 cars of various types and for the 60 locomotives which the directors authorized on June 15. The contracts will cost about $6,000,000.

V. C. Miller, painter at the Pennsylvania shops, will go to Decatur this evening to join his wife on the farm of a relative near that place. Mrs. Miller went there two or three days ago. They will return home Tuesday evening.

Joseph J. Hake, who had been off duty on account of the wedding of a relative, is again making steam for one of the Pennsylvania flyer's engines. Fireman O. R. Leedy, who had been taking a week's vacation, also reported for work this morning.

The men engaged in making the eye and ear tests of Pennsylvania employes and the car in which the examinations are conducted will start on a trip over the western end of the division Wednesday, which will complete that work for this time. These examinations are made about every two years.

Benjamin E. Walsh, the sociologist, said of immigration in a recent lecture in Reading:

"I would not restrict immigration. It is true that some immigrants, entering for the first time a free country, abuse their freedom. But they soon get over that.

"We are all apt to abuse unwonted freedom. I know an Englishman who on his arrival in New York demanded a glass of whisky in a palatial bar.

"Now, in England your whisky is measured out to you in a small tin measure, but in our bar the Englishman, to his astonishment, had the full bottle set before him. He was given for the first time the freedom of the bottle.

"And, though a rich man, he abused that freedom. He took an enormous drink. Then he rose and handed the bartender 15 cents.

"'Hold on, sir,' the bartender called after him. 'You've forgotten your change.'

"'I thought the drink was 15 cents,' said the Englishman.

"'Yes, that is so,' said the bartender, 'but that is the retail price. There's a reduction when you buy wholesale.'"—Washington Star.

WHERE THERE'S A WILL.

Any school can have a teacher training class that wants one. It may be a class of teachers at a week-day hour. There is such an hour within the reach of every group of teachers who really feel their needs. It may cost something to get it, but they can have it if they want it. It may be a group from several churches working together, and in addition to this, the class of young people at the Sunday school hour should be maintained in each separate school. For city or for country, the large class is simply a question of willingness and serious desire for efficiency. Whoever, with deep longing, wants to be a successful worker in the Master's kingdom, will be willing to give this much time and strength. Wherever this is done faithfully, studiously, it will in time solve the teaching problem, and in that way the hardest problem of the Sabbath school will be answered.—Exchange.

Have You Been Born Again?

An Unpublished Sermon by DWIGHT L. MOODY.

Text—John 3: 3: "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God."

[This is one of twenty remarkable sermons preached by Mr. Moody and not before published. It was preached in Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass., January 27, 1897. It is reprinted here from the Christian Herald.]

Did Jesus Christ teach the truth while here on earth? If he did teach the truth, as we believe, then this is the question I want to ask: Have you (I don't mean the general audience, but the auditor personally) have you been born again? As the Holy Ghost explains it, "born again," "born of the Spirit," "born from above." Now if you haven't Jesus Christ taught very clearly that you cannot see the kingdom, much less inhabit it. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

Now, we can afford to be deceived about ten thousand things rather than about this one thing. I firmly believe it would have been far better had I never come into this world and come to years of understanding, than that I should die without being born again—without being born from above. Christ taught that to Nicodemus, who was a ruler of the Jews. He taught it over and over again; he insisted on the New Birth. He taught that a man could not buy his way into heaven; that he could not work his way in; that he could not educate himself in; that he could not force his way in; and that there is only one way, and that is to be born again. It is a solemn question.

The Natural Man.

I was told some years ago, while preaching in a New England town, that the New Birth would do for the slums of Boston, New York and Philadelphia, but not for intelligent people like those they have in New England. But there is no difference. Culture is all right in its place, but that isn't the New Birth. A man may be a moral man and not a Christian, I will admit, but no man can be a Christian without being a moral man. You want to keep that in mind. The longer I live and the more I mingle with men, I am the more shaky about there being so many men and women who are naturally so good. I will venture to say that if a man could invent something to take a photograph of the heart, and bring out everything in the heart—bring to the light all our secret sins, and everything—I don't believe he'd find a customer anywhere. There's not a man or woman who could be hired to have their heart photographed. We men arrange our toilet, go off and get shaved, cut off our hair, put on our best clothes, and go to the artist, and in our best clothes have our pictures, or rather our faces, taken; and if the artist flatters, and makes us ten years younger than we are, we say, "You are the first man to take us as we are." You pay $25 for the pictures and you say, "It's correct." But if he should take the human heart, you'd break the plate right before the artist. You wouldn't send that around.

Take another illustration: Take the natural man—never forgiven of his sins; if his secret thoughts were today stamped on his forehead, there wouldn't be room enough for the record. And if there were, he'd sneak out of sight pretty quick. It is one thing for a man to talk about natural goodness. I have had foolish wives comes to me saying, "I wish you would pray for my husband. He is as good as he can be." That's the one thing—he's bad; he's not good. If I get angry and knock a man down, that hand isn't to blame. The trouble isn't with the hand or feet. People wish they could get control of their tongue, and of their temper. The seat of the trouble is in the heart. "The heart is deceitful and desperately wicked." Where does the whole army of drunkards come from? Sixty thousand drunkards every year! And the rum traffic says, "Give me sixty thousand of your children, your promising boys, to keep up this army of mine." Where do they come from? They come from hearts deceived. They don't start in to be drunkards, but their hearts deceive them. There's nothing more deceitful than the human heart!

In the seventh chapter of Mark Christ gives a description of the heart. "For from within, out of the heart of man, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness—all these evil things come from within and defile the man." Now, you'll never make a man right as long as his heart is wrong. No outward revolution will make your heart right. You'll never get a pure stream as long as you have a bad fountain. Make the fountain good and the stream will be good. You make the tree good and the fruit will be good. Make the heart right, and you make the eye right; you make the hand right; you make the thought right. The whole body will be full of light if the heart is right.

The Natural Mind.

A man wrote me a most abusive letter because I made the statement that we wouldn't have any hard times if it wasn't for sin. I want to state that again. The statement I did make was that if men would give up tobacco and whisky we would have plenty of money. That's where the trouble is. Hard times are brought upon us on account of our sins and our iniquities. Let us turn back to God and we will have good times. Do you doubt it? We have turned away. When the prodigal turned away, he hungered; and when a man turns away from God, there's a hunger in his soul. And you'll never be satisfied till you turn back. What took the prodigal away? His heart had deceived him. He thought he would be better away from his father's house and home. He was deceived; men are under the power of delusion, because their heart is disloyal and wrong. Romans 8:5—"For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." Listen: "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither can be."

Now, the best part of a man is his mind. If that is against God, then the best part of him is against him. The carnal mind is enmity itself. It is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. A man cannot serve God until he is born of God. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." I have had mothers come to me, and say, "Isn't it strange that my boy doesn't like spiritual things?" No, of course not, until he has been born of the Spirit. The worldly man likes worldly things and the spiritual man likes spiritual things. Therefore you see the necessity of being born of the Spirit. When I was born of my parents I got their fleshy nature, and when I was born of God I got God's nature—another nature. One is distinct and separate from the other.

What It Means to Be "Born Again."

I Cor. 2:14—"The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." Don't you hear people say that we are fools because we come out here today? Hundreds of men think we are a little daft because we are interested in these things. They don't understand how we can listen to songs and psalms and Scripture from day to day. They don't understand it. Why? Because they don't have a spiritual nature. But the moment they are born of the Spirit, they get a nature that reaches out to these things, and then they understand it. Keep it in mind—the necessity.

That which is born of the flesh will be flesh; it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. A man said this was foolishness. He said, "I don't understand it." And then I quoted what Paul says about the natural man. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him." He said, "Does Paul say that?" "Yes, they are foolishness." That's what they are. But they are foolishness to the man born of God. The greatest joy I have had in this world was when I could not see anything. You can not convey that idea to a natural man. That's the trouble. Godly wives do not understand how their unconverted husbands cannot bear to go to church, and cannot bear prayer meetings and praise meetings. If you will pray that God may convert them, and have faith born from above, they will look at these things differently.

I think some ministers would be amazed and astonished if they should catchize some of their members on the subject of the new Birth—what it is to be born again. I have asked people sometimes who have been in the church for years: "What makes you think you have been born from above?" "Well, because I go to church regularly". Satan goes to church as regularly as any one. He is there before it is dedicated; and if I am faithful in preaching the Word of God, satan will be very busy here and will catch away the seed if possible, so that it cannot remain in your heart. The idea is a mistake that he is only down in the gambling hells and evil resorts. If there is any danger of your getting out of his kingdom, he will try to get somebody to whisper in your thought and heart that you are not a Christian. Why, if it was merely going to church that's going to make Christians, we would manage to get them there somehow. A man may be a deep-dyed villain and go to church to cover up his villainy. I do not say, however, "Except ye go to church, ye cannot see the kingdom of God."

Another man says, "I do Christian deeds." I met a man, who said he thought he would go to heaven if anybody did, for his daughter played the organ in church and he entertained the minister. A woman said to me, "My brother is an archdeacon." I said, "I don't know anything about your brother." But she thought because her brother was an archdeacon that she was all right for heaven—that it sort of ticketed her through—because her brother was an archdeacon. Well, you smile at that What's your idea? What makes you think you are a Christian?

I've had lots of people tell me that they were born in this country, and this is a Christian country. That's their hope of heaven. And some say, "I not only go to church, but I am a church member. I have been baptized, or confirmed, and united with the church." My friend, do you not know that you may be all that and not be born again? Did not Judas go from that holy scene and sell himself for thirty pieces of silver? I don't know but he had partaken of the bread under this New Dispensation, but he went right out and sold his Master. A man may go from the communion table and do the darkest deeds. That's not conversion. Why, if you could baptize them into the kingdom of God, as you would have to do would be to pass a law that all children should be baptized. Get them into the kingdom that way. But you know that is not being "born of God," or "from above," or "again."

A Personal Experience.

Nor is it coming to meetings and having your feelings wrought upon and "turning over a new leaf," as you call it, and making good resolutions. If it meant all the resolutions made by any audience, it would take fourteen horses to draw them: I used to go to Boston when a young man, and I said I would turn over a new leaf; and on Monday night that leaf was as blue as on Saturday. I went so far once as to draw my blood out of my veins and sign the resolution with my own blood. It didn't stay! And it isn't the death of some friend. You go to some funeral and make promises and vows and tell the minister that you are going to lead a different life. There's not a minister who has not had that kind of converts. But that's not the New Birth.

You ask, "Won't you tell us what it is?" Listen: "He came unto his own" (that Jewish nation), "and his own received him not; but as many as received him, to them gave he power, or privilege, or authority, to become the children of God; who were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of men, but of God." Born of God! When I was born of my parents, I got a life from them, and when I was born of God, I got a life from God. That's the teaching of Scripture. When one has that new life, he is a new man. It is regeneration by the power of the Holy Ghost that this nature wants. Then we know we are born of the Spirit. "The words I speak unto you, they are Spirit, and they are life." There is life in his Word. I take his Word into my heart. Man lost life by not believing the Word of God; man will get it again by believing the Word of God. "The word that I speak unto you is Spirit and life." Peter was sent from Joppa to Cesarea to tell how Cornelius and his house should be saved. Peter calls it the "incorruptible seed," the Word of God. If I should take my watch and plant it, I wouldn't get little watches, would I? Why? Because the germ of life isn't there. You might take barrels of gravel and plant them, and you wouldn't get more gravel, would you? Why? Because the germ of life isn't in that stone. But take a barrel of grain, and let the rain and dew and snow fall upon it, and see if something doesn't start from it.

Peter says the "incorruptible seed" is the Word of God. There's life in his Word. Take his Word down into your heart and lay hold of it. Believe it! Believe it! I don't ask you to feel it. "Verily, verily, I say unto you." Put your own name in there. Jesus Christ speaks to you as if you were the only man in the world. "He that believeth on him that sent me hath everlasting life." He doesn't say to you shall have it. But "and shall not come into condemnation; but has passed from death unto life." God's remedy for sin is Jesus Christ in the heart. "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life." If you haven't got him, receive him now. Peter says we become partakers of the divine nature. God has showered blessings upon me. My lines have fallen in very pleasant places; but there's one blessing high above them all. It took place one night in 1855, when it pleased God to reveal his Son to me, and I became a partaker of the divine nature. I went up by Tremont temple the next morning, and it seemed as if the sun were shining brighter than ever before. I walked through Boston Common, and it seemed as if the birds were singing for my benefit. It seemed as if those old elms clapped their hands for joy, and all nature was at peace. And I didn't know myself. It took some time to get acquainted with the new man. The old man had passed away. I love to tell people that they can get something better than this old life. You can be a free man in Christ, if you will.

In India the swan is considered a great bird. There is a legend that an old crane was looking out for snails and the swan came down and alighted near that crane, and stretched out its neck. The old crane said, "Where did you come from?" The swan said, "I came from heaven." "Heaven? I never heard of that," said the crane. "Is it far away?" "Yes; it's far away." "Is it a good country?" "Oh, yes." "Is it as goo das this?" "Oh, yes, far better." And the swan told about the lakes and the rivers and the fountains and the climate, and the crane stood there, listening. And the crane said, "Have they got any snails there?" And the swan drew itself up, and said, with indignation: "No, they wouldn't have vile things there." And the crane said, "You may have your heaven; I want snails."

There's a mighty truth wrapped up in that. Did you ever see a young man who has a mother and father, and whose mother loved him with all her soul? Her home is as beautiful as a bit of paradise let down in this world. Lovely father and brothers and sisters! And the boy will go down into the slums, down, lower and lower, and he will hunt around, and at last will clean out the spittoons for drunkards. Tell him ho his mother wants him to come home, how she loves and yearns for him; tell him that if he will only return what a welcome he will get. He will tel you that he can't go back, for he wants whisky. He will give up his mother and his young wife and beautiful children—his old white-haired father, and reputation and character, and his soul, his life and heaven—if you will only give him whisky! What's the trouble? He has got the crane nature. Put into him the swan nature, and he gets up and goes out. Ge the swan nature into the drunkards and they will get away from the whisky. It's the new nature they want. They want to become partakers of the divine nature. You let the 30,000 churches churches of America go to preaching this day and night, and we'll have a mighty success.

IN TIME OF TROUBLE.

Say—

First—He brought me here; it is by his will I am in this strait place: in that will I rest.

Next—He will here keep me in his love, and give me grace in this trial to act as his child.

Then—He will make the trial a blessing, teaching me the lesson he means me to learn and working in me the grace he intends for me.

Last—In his good time he can bring me out again—how and when, he knows.

Say—I am here:

First—By God's appointment.

Second—In his keeping.

Third—Under his training.

Fourth—For his time.—Andrew Murray.

A TRIP TO THE HEAVENLY PLACE

Once in my life I went to heaven. It was a place. The size of it was a little upper story room in a very small village in Southern Ohio. It was not a home of wealth, though there was no want. There were the elegance of education, the illumination of intellect, cultured companionship, and the restfulness religion only can afford. The heart of the home seemed real. The head of the house was a professional man, busy day and night in the arts chirurgic and therapeutic. It was super-ordinary to be in that household. That little upper story, though, was the center of that happy place. It contained the crumpled form of a once stately woman, now aged and helpless. The little limbs no longer could sustain her weight, and the sometime untiring arms were retired from activity.

She was almost half way between the years of eighty and ninety, and was being consumed by a loathsome, malignant cancer that steadily ate into that no longer blooming cheek, till it was almost gone. In her prime she had been a priceess among her people, and unwittingly a leader. Her mind had, in early youth and amid advancing years, when rearing a large family, been the steady receptacle for intellectual and spiritual knowledge. While it was yet plastic she stored it well.

In all her years of sickness there was no suffering, a condition very rare with this awful disease. It seemed the Lord had been permitted to visit her. One could remain but a short time in the room because of the insupportable odor, but there even then was a new earth, and that new earth was heaven. One eye had gone with the progress of the untamable monster, and a bandage covered the mouth, but surrounded by pictures and flowers she lived from day to day, moved to and from her bed and chair by patient hands long inured to the toil of love, and found in such narrow limits the means of perfect contentment. She was in heaven. She could not adjust her glasses properly on account of the bothersome bandages, yet she managed to get one lens over the good eye and thus for hours pore over the pages of the Book as though, at that age, and with all her ripe erudition, she had to learn better the way to heaven.

I was asked by herself to administer the sacrament of the Lord's supper to her and her assembled children. The individual cup was used. There in that little holy of holies, we supped together with her who so soon was to eat and drink anew with him in the Father's kingdom. There was the potent breath of heaven. There we fed on the heavenly manna.

No one heard any complaining from that sweet saint. All was complete resignation, except occasionally when she expressed a wonder why the chariot and the horseman tarried so long. Her son, himself a grandfather, was attempting to recall some of the poems she used to repeat to him in his far-away boyhood; she corrected his errors in speech and recited long excerpts of verse as best she could with her muffled lips and thickened tongue.

In that "valley of the shadow" there was no shadow at all. Everything was illumined with the ineffable brightness of the throne and the glory of him who sat thereon.

"There'll be no dark valley when Jesus comes," for her. She already lives in the land of the leal.

I felt I had come away from heaven when I left that ante-room of glory.

I know there is a heaven; for I have been there.—Central Advocate.

EVERYDAY RELIGION.

Religion that isn't good for every day isn't much good for any day. If it doesn't stay with a man on Monday, it was only a cloak and a mockery on Sunday. If it doesn't show itself in the home, breathing upon every one therein a kindly and helpful and strengthening influence, then it will make a fine show in the house of God to very little purpose indeed. If religion doesn't grip a man's soul, if it isn't the one thing in his whole life, Sunday and Saturday, day and night, then it becomes so near to being nothing that it is scarcely worth reckoning at all. When we speak of everyday religion, we speak of the only genuine kind of religion that there is. And it is its homely everyday quality that will commend it to the world, and will in the end win for it the allegiance of the world. Religion is for every day. Its blessings and benefits, its comforts and its inspiration are for the commonplace days in the commonplace lives of commonplace men and women. It is something to take with one, something that will never be out of place anywhere, something that will add to life's joy its best touch of sweetness and will mix with all life's sorrows, hope and courage and power. A man who has everyday religion in good, wholesome quantity can easily afford to be without a good many other things.—Christian Guardian.

FORGETTING GOD.

Some sixty years ago Thomas Carlyle said: "The beginning and the end of what is the matter with us in these days is that we have forgotten God." This is the whole situation in a nutshell. Trouble of every description, individual, domestic, social, civil, industrial, political, national and international, finds its source and fountainhead in forgetfulness of God. Men map out for themselves a plan of life that has in it no place for God, and then wonder that they ever should see trouble; but no man can ignore God and prosper in the real sense. He may prosper in the material sense, gain wealth, position and honor among men; but if he is without God there will be a worm at the core of his happiness and some day his prosperity will wilt and wither like Jonah's gourd, leaving no protection for his head. The wise man saw how prone men are, growing old in sin, to keep on forgetting God, and so he calls to all young people everywhere, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth."—Michigan Presbyterian.

The Atonement

The Suffering Servant of Jehovah.

International Sunday School Lesson for Sunday, July 9, 1911. By Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts.

Lesson Text—Isa. 52: 13; 58: 12. Golden Text—Isa. 53:6: "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all."

(From the Christian Herald.)

The fifty-third chapter of Isaiah is probably the grandest chapter in the Bible, because it so fully sets forth the atoning Savior. It is the story of the mental crucifixion of Christ—of how he bore our griefs and carried our sorrows; how he was stricken, smitten and afflicted. Verily it was no easy matter for him to suffer for the sins of the whole world! Because of this chapter and the other references to Christ, Isaiah the writer was called by the old fathers of the church "the evangelist." Among the prophets he has a place all his own. His wonderful sayings have staggered men, and some have said very unwise things in trying to account for him. Let us not take man's words as a commentary upon this fifty-third chapter, but rather let us consider what the Bible has to say about it.

In Acts 8:26-38 we may read a wonderful story showing the power of this chapter. In short, by means of it the Gospel was first introduced into Africa. The story is as follows: The treasurer of Queen Candace of Ethiopia had made a journey of 1,000 miles or more to the city of Jerusalem in search of truth. He learned something, but not all he wanted to know, and before starting on his return home, he purchased a book, even the prophecy of Isaiah. Being deeply interested, and a studious man, he opened the book, and read as he journeyed along in his almost royal chariot. God looked down from heaven and saw him; not only saw what he was doing, but what he was thinking—that he was indeed a seeker after truth, and that he was somewhat puzzled as he was reading this very fifty-third chapter. And God knew where to find a man who could be a helper for him. It was Philip, who had gone to Samaria to preach the Gospel. God spoke to Philip, telling him to go down to the road in which the treasurer would pass. And Philip ran to do God's bidding, and came so near to the chariot that he could hear the words of the Ethiopian. He heard him reading aloud this fifty-third chapter. And Philip asked: "Do you understand what you are reading?" He said he could not understand it unless some man should help him, and he invited Philip to come and sit beside him in the chariot. Then they read together about the servant of God, who should be led as a lamb to the slaughter (Isa. 53:7). "Whom does the prophet mean by this?" asked the treasurer. Then Philip told him all about Jesus. At once he became a follower of Jesus, and wanted Philip to baptize him, which Philip did, because there was a river near by. Afterward Philip did not get into the chariot again, for God had another place for him to go, and the treasurer rode on in his chariot to his far-away home. I am sure he must have read about Jesus over and over again, and also all of the other words of Isaiah. All of this happened more than 700 years after Isaiah had written the book, and now it is more than 2,600 years ago, and still people in every part of the world are reading Isaiah's wonderful words about Jesus and learning to be Christ's followers.

Once I heard a gentleman, who had been a bishop in Africa—the country whence that treasurer came—preach about this chapter. He said he had preached in Africa from this fifty-third chapter of Isaiah oftener than from any other part of the Bible; and that he always told the story of the queen's treasurer. There is nothing more in the Bible about the treasurer, but there are legends (stories which may be true) about how he told about Jesus himself after he returned home, and that more than a thousand people became the followers of Christ.

The Measurements of the Cross.

In Isaiah's Gospel, as in the New Testament, the central pre-eminent fact is the Messiah's atoning death. Artists speak of Van Dyck's "Crucifixion," and Rubens' "Crucifixion." Both are wondrous pictures, but Isaiah's crucifixion—the word picture in the fifty-third chapter—is grandest of all. Not even John or Paul in the Bible books they have written set forth the atoning significance of the cross so fully in any one chapter.

What is the breadth of Christ's cross? It is as broad as the whole world; for he died for the whole world, as it is written, "He is the propitiation, not for our sins only, but for the sins of the whole world." And that is the breadth of Christ's cross.

What is the length of Christ's cross? The length thereof, says an old Father, signifies the time during which its virtues will last. How long then is the cross of Christ? Long enough to last through all time. As long as there is a sinner to be saved—as long as there is ignorance, sorrow, pain, death, or anything else which is contrary to God and hurtful to man in the universe of God—so long will Christ's cross last.

"As high as the highest heaven and the throne of God, and the bosom of the Father. When Christ died on the cross, heaven came down to earth, and earth ascended into heaven. And when he arose from the dead, he sealed the virtue of his death forever."—Charles Kingsley.

He Bore the Sins of Many.

No intelligent person claims that guilt is transferred from the guilty to the innocent, or that punishment in the strict sense of the word is inflicted on any innocent person. But it is a matter of everyday occurrence that innocent persons voluntarily suffer in place of the guilty, and that this often softens the offender's heart, and maintains the honor of the law at the same time. It is an historical fact that the son of one of the Seleucidae, king of Antioch, the prince royal, broke a law of the realm, the penalty of which was that the culprit's eyes should be put out. But the king's heart yearned for his son. The king could not bear to think of his own son as groping his way in total darkness. But what could he do? If he should say, "I cannot punish my son. I must remit the penalty, and let him go free," his subjects, from the nobles down to the meanest slaves, would have said, "Fie! Oh! for shame!" But the just king, to maintain the majesty of the law and the righteous administration of government, and yet exercise mercy to his rebellious son, submitted to have one of his own eyes put out, and thus saved one eye of his son. No doubt every subject said afterward: "Oh, what a dreadful thing it is to sin against the government! What a righteous sovereign! What a gracious father!" But the greater Sovereign, for our salvation from the results of disobedience of God's law, laid upon him who was dearer than his right eye—his only begotten Son—the iniquity of us all.

Still it is hard to understand how Jesus Christ could bear the accursed load and set us free. Perhaps the following incident will help to make it plain to us. There was a dissolute young man in the army of Russia. His father had put him in there hoping that the strict discipline would make a man of him. But he went on gambling and drinking, even worse than before. Finally, he had to meet his debts or go to jail. One night, just before going to bed, he took a piece of paper and wrote down on it all of his debts. He wept as he looked at the large sum, and he wrote under it: "Who is to pay this great debt?" Then he fell asleep at his desk. That night the czar passed through the barracks, and finding the young officer's lamp burning, took up the piece of paper and read it. He wrote under it, "Nicholas," and then passed on. When the young man awoke, what was his surprise to find the signature of the czar of all the Russias there. "What can it mean?" he said. "Who put it there?" He thought it too good to be true. But early in the morning the money came, and the debt was paid.

Justice requires that our debt of sin shall be paid, but justice is satisfied when another, with his and our consent, pays the penalty. So the prophet Isaiah wrote with God's guiding hand, "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." The doctrine of substitution as expressed in the golden text has special reference to the "scapegoat" in the Mosaic law. On the day of atonement, the high priest, having first by offerings purified himself, took two kids of the goats, and killed one as a sin offering to bear the punishment for the sins of the people as their substitute, a typical representative of Christ. This indicated justification, the people's acquittal from guilt by their representative. Then the removal of the guilt and love of sin was pictured when the high priest laid his hands upon the head of the living goat to represent the laying on of all the people's iniquities upon him, and sent him out into the uninhabited wilderness, "taking away their sins." So of Christ: On Calvary "the Lord laid upon him the iniquity of us all," and as our scapegoat he bore our sins into the wilderness of the tomb, and of course left them buried there, for he could not rise and ascend with sin upon him.

"As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us."

A Hint for Teachers and Parents of Young Children.

It is sometimes supposed that children under eight years of age cannot understand the atonement, and so they are taught they "must be good to get to heaven." That is false doctrine that will be hard for them to unlearn by and by, and unlearn they must. Better teach the children from the first to say that they will reach heaven because Jesus is so good, and later they can be taught that Jesus forgives them and makes them good. Teach them that no one without Jesus can ever be good enough to enter heaven. The cross in churches and worn so frequently as an ornament prepares the way for the children to be early taught its significance.

TRUE TO HIS CONVICTIONS.

A young man graduated from a scientific school. His home life had been sweet and beautiful because of Christian faith and love. He was a member of the church and his parents, brothers and sisters were God-fearing. On graduating, his desires turned toward a life and career among the western mines. Full of courage and hope, he turned his face toward the setting sun. On the journey he fell in with older men in this line of work. They liked him for his frank manners, and his air of manly independence. On the way they stopped over Sunday in a border town. The young man's principles would here be severely tested. On Sunday morning one of his fellow-travelers said to him, "Come, let's be off for a drive and see the sights."

The other men fell in with the idea, and it was not easy for the youngest member of the company to stand alone. They would doubtless ridicule his particular notions, as they would call them, and go on their way with a laugh and a sneer. But he bravely said:

"No, thank you. I'm going to church. I have been brought up to keep the Sabbath and I have promised my mother to continue to keep it."

The one who had given the invitation looked at him for a moment, then slapping him on the shoulder, said:

"Right, my boy; I began that way, and I wish I had kept on. You have chosen well. Stick to your bringing up and your mother's words, and you will win out."

The boy went to the little frontier church, while his companions went on their drive. But the young man had gained their confidence and won their respect by avowed choice of the right course of action. His faithfulness was also rewarded in his secular work, for sooner than he expected he won great success. The world is waiting for young men whose choices show them to be trustworthy.—Selected.

INFIDEL'S THOUGHT ON PRAYER.

In a recent story in a popular magazine a character is made to say in regard to a situation of doubt and trouble, "Twenty years ago I should have prayed for guidance. By this time I understand that we are endowed with intelligence to guide ourselves properly, while God gives his more immediate attention to larger affairs, like fixing new stars."

This view is, unhappily, not confined to fiction. Prayer, as some one says, is an almost forgotten secret; or rather the habit of prayer, the state of mind in which one in trouble or doubt instinctively turns to God for help and guidance, as a child goes to its mother with unfailing trust in her love and power.

Not waiting for great troubles, but in little things we need God's help; and it is waiting for the asking. The prayer for help to make a right decision, and being made to know it is right, because of the prayer; the asking for patience and gentleness step by step during the day as the need arises, with children, or servants, or business; if it is only "Lord, help me." The prayer for dear ones in sickness or trouble; then leaving it with God, putting the burden on him—this is prayer. The absence of this attitude is why there is so little peace and joy in our religion—so much worry and harassing care.

How ready God is to answer such prayer, let his word show. When Daniel prays—"even while he is speaking"—the word goes forth with the answer. Read of Abraham, Jacob, Gideon, David, Elijah, Hezekiah and others too numerous to mention. When Nehemiah wishes to ask the heathen king for help in restoring Jerusalem, as the king speaks he says, "So I prayed the the God of heaven." When Abraham's servant is sent to seek a wife for his master's only son, he prays in his heart, and while he is speaking the maiden comes.

How rich are the Psalms and the New Testament in admonitions to prayer—even our blessed Lord himself and many others.

"Whatsoever ye shall ask" does not restrict us to great and mighty needs. "Hath God forgotten to be gracious?" Is he farther from us than in the old days? No; it is our own fault, and "we have not because we ask not."—Southern Churchman.

THE TEST.

Mr. Moody once told the story of an artificial bee that would buzz and fly around. The man who made it placed it on a table beside a real bee, and then challenged any one to tell the difference. A man secured a drop of honey and placed it upon the table. The real bee went directly for the honey, while the artificial bee continued to buzz and fly around. There are many who profess to love God, buzzing around in church activities, "cumbered with much loving," but who will not feed his sheep. Love must express itself upon an object, and a real, living child of God goes after the lost sheep.—Ex.

AN ATHEIST SILENCED.

On one occasion, whilst standing near a number of persons who were gathered under the big shed in the city of H——, I overheard one man loudly entertaining the others with his atheistical views. He was very emphatic in his denial of God, and, as the hearers seemed to enjoy his discourse somewhat, I found it my duty to step forward, and to interrupt him with this question:

"Do you really believe as you speak—that there is no God?"

He answered that neither himself nor his father had ever in such a way or words to that effect.

"Well, if you do not believe that there is a God, it is useless for me to inquire as to whether you accept the Bible as the word of God."

"No," he replied, "I don't believe such stuff. I believe that man made it up."

"That's strange," I replied, "but you will find your name mentioned in that book."

He looked on me with surprise.

I asked, "Will you answer me a question?"

"Yes, if it is a reasonable one."

"If you have anything in your heart that you have not told to any one, am I, or any one, capable of knowing what it is?"

After disputing without giving me a straight answer for a while, he, being hard pressed, at length said, "No, neither you nor any man could know what is in my heart if I had never mentioned it."

I then continued, "By your own admission, no man could know, but God knew, and he had it written down in two places in his book, in the fourteenth and fifty-third Psalms, first verse, 'The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God.' Now, mind you, that was written 2,500 years before this, and it proves that God knows what is in the heart of such a fool, for you have just given evidence that this foolish thought of God's nonexistence is in your heart, and God must have known it was there quite as much in your case as in the other. No one but God could record in his own book such an evidence of his existence as is established by the mouth of the very one who denies him. No one here could possibly have known your views on this point unless you uttered them. But God knew what was in your heart, and your very denial of God and of his word proves the existence of both."

On finding that his own admissions confuted his infidel assertion he was completely silenced, and, possibly, convinced.—The Faith and the Flock.

Pollyooly and the Lump

THE SIEGE

By Edgar Jepson

her best red Jeeping manner to an underkeeper who had the fond idea that so much noise was not good for his sacred, but nesting, pheasants. Pollyooly felt very strongly that it was the inalienable right of the daughter of a Duke to disturb nesting pheasants if she wanted to and the feeling that she was the daughter of a Duke was growing on her.

On the fourth day of her stay at the Court a new and disquieting figure came into her life. The Duke was to arrive at four o'clock, and Mrs. Hutton dressed Pollyooly to have tea with him and Lady Salkeld in the great hall. When Pollyooly came into it, she found not only the Duke but also his nephew and heir Lord Ronald Ricksborough, a dark, good-looking boy of fourteen, of an almost girlish delicacy of complexion. The Duke, a dapper little thin-lipped man of thirty-five, protruded two limp fingers, and Pollyooly shook them gingerly. Ronald shook hands with her in a somewhat perfunctory and condescending fashion.

Then another newcomer, a fox-terrier, came forward and sniffed at her skirts with an air of inquiring doubt.

Their elders, who were talking to one another, noticed nothing, but Ronald said in a tone of great astonishment, "Why, what's the matter with Wiggs? He's pretending he doesn't know Marion."

It seemed to Pollyooly that now, if ever, was the time for airs; she drew herself up and said scornfully, "He's a silly dog."

"That he isn't! He's one of the most intelligent dogs in the world; and you know it as well as I do," said Ronald hotly.

"He's not intelligent now, anyhow," said Pollyooly coldly.

"He must be kidding," said Ronald; but he looked with a puzzled air from Wiggs to Pollyooly and from Pollyooly to Wiggs.

Pollyooly felt that she would have to be very careful indeed in his presence; and she made up her mind to avoid him as much as she possibly could. But she was thrown with him a good deal, for he took his breakfast, tea, and supper with her and Miss Marlow; and at lunch he sat beside Pollyooly.

To remain silent was foreign to his nature; and she found his talk awkward to deal with, for it was full of allusions to events which had happened during his last holidays in which they had both taken part. Sometimes she extricated herself successfully from her difficulties; sometimes she did not.

One morning at breakfast, after one of her failures, he said to Miss Marlow, "Marion's memory's getting jolly bad."

"Then it's like your manners," said Pollyooly, exercising the somewhat dangerous gift of retort she had acquired during her two years' residence with her Aunt Hannah in the little slum which runs along the back of the King's Bench Walk.

"Now last holidays you'd never have said a thing like that. You weren't a bit cheeky," said Ronald, and he looked at her with that puzzled air which had become his most frequent manner of regarding her.

"Cheeky yourself!" said Pollyooly with some heat.

"I think you've changed tremendously," said Ronald. "Don't you think she's changed, Miss Marlow?"

"I think her intelligence is improving," said Miss Marlow.

"I don't think it's only that," said Ronald, doubtfully.

Pollyooly was very much alive to her danger. At meal times she talked as little as possible; at other times she shunned him. But the fancy took him, in default of other companionship, to spend a good deal of his time with her. Pollyooly had not only excellent reason to avoid him, she had also a great distrust of boys in general: to her they were a savage tribe who pulled your hair when you were not looking, or, when you were, a tribe which rudely called her "Ginger." But there was no avoiding him; for it was quite impossible for him to conceive, plain as Pollyooly tried to make it, that Marion did not really desire his company.

Pollyooly was greatly surprised to find that he lacked the hair-pulling habit. To her even greater surprise he was most of the time courteous. She was the less surprised therefore to find herself, at the end of a couple of days of his society, regarding an indubitable boy with approval, even with liking. She began to find the task of deceiving him not only trying but also ungrateful.

For his part he was most agreeably surprised by the changes in his cousin. She had acquired an untiring activity which she had before utterly lacked: she displayed a very quick and observant intelligence. She entered into all his pursuits, except riding, with a zest which made her an admirable comrade.

But for all Pollyooly's wariness, when they were together, Ronald's face was never for long free from its puzzled air. She could not help the occasional display of an astounding ignorance. Sometimes he would deliberately set a trap for her; and as often as not he caught her. His suspicions grew and grew; but he did not confide them to anyone. Even if he had been willing to get Pollyooly into trouble, as he was not, he was very strongly of the opinion that all the grown-ups would laugh at him for them. After all, that Marion should be someone else was incredible.

Then he attained certainty. One afternoon they had wandered into a part of the estate new to Pollyooly; and they came out of a wood to see on a hillside half a mile away a windmill with whirling sails.

"Whatever's that?" cried Pollyooly, startled out of her caution by the sight.

"Whatever's what?" said Ronald.

"That thing turning round," said Pollyooly, pointing to the windmill.

"That settles it," said Ronald, throwing himself down on the turf. "If you were Marion, you'd have seen that windmill a dozen times and the windmill at Wootton Cross a hundred times. You didn't know that it was a windmill; you're not Marion."

Pollyooly opened her mouth to declare that she was Marion, but shut it without uttering a word. She had been carefully trained not to lie; and it would not in any case have been easy to her; but she found it almost impossible to lie to Ronald.

She looked round the landscape rather wildly, seeking inspiration; then she said, "Well, something must have gone wrong with my memory."

"Rats! You're not Marion; and it's no good pretending you are—to me. Who are you?" said Ronald firmly.

Pollyooly said nothing; she scowled horribly at the innocent windmill.

"Now, out with it," said Ronald. "If you tell me straight away, I won't split. I give you my word."

Pollyooly shook her head; but her puckered brow smoothed a little.

"Now come on. What's the good of keeping a secret which isn't a secret?" said Ronald.

"It all comes of not letting you do all the talking. But it was so sudden—that thing going round," said Pollyooly ruefully. "You won't really tell anyone?"

"Not a soul," said Ronald.

"Well, I can't tell you who I am, because I mustn't; but I'm not Marion," said Pollyooly.

"Where is she?" said Ronald.

"I don't know where she is; but she has run away with her mother—ever so far—where they'll never, never be found. I'm just staying here till they've got there safely."

"By Jove, but this is a game! It's like a story in a book. You do have luck," said Ronald enviously. Then he added reflectively, "Well, I'm glad that kid has got away to her mother. She was rather a rotter; and I never cared much for her, though I believe I'm going to marry her when we grow up. She had a poor time here."

"Fancy having a poor time in a place like this! She must have been silly!" cried Pollyooly.

"I said she was rather a rotter. But what am I to call you? I'm not going to call you Marion. She's rather set me against the name."

Pollyooly considered a while. It seemed safe to impart her Christian name; and she told him that it was Mary, adjuring him not to call her by it before anyone.

"No fear," he said. "And if I did, they'd never notice. Why, they never noticed that you were worth two of Marion and ever so much prettier."

"Am I?" said Pollyooly with some gratification.

"Now, it's nothing to get vain about; you can't help it," said Ronald in an admonitory tone.

He went on to inquire about her plans; and his face fell when he learnt that she was only going to stay another week. He begged her to stay till the end of his holidays, pointing out that it would make it much safer for Marion if she did. But Pollyooly assured him that that was the term fixed; and in her heart of hearts she would not have had it longer. Pleasant as the Court was, she wanted to get back to the Lump. She had an uneasy feeling that it was not right that she should be having this splendid time in the country with the Lump in stuffy London.

Ronald's discovery set them on far more intimate terms with one another as sharers of a great secret. He was no longer condescending with her; he felt that the fact that she was playing the chief part in such a difficult game relieved her to a great degree from the disability under which she suffered of being a girl. Now, too, that she no longer needed to be so much on her guard, she talked to him freely, and proved a lively and entertaining companion. They became the closest of comrades, inseparable. Miss Marlow was deeply and romantically touched by the fact that so early in life such a warm sympathy prevailed between two beings who were destined later to be welded together by the marriage bond.

Naturally, when the morning of the fatal day of parting arrived, they were both sad. Quite unconsciously they spent it in a pilgrimage to the haunts in which they had most enjoyed themselves. At the end of the morning they were coming along one of the shrubberies towards the house when the lunch-bell rang.

Pollyooly stopped short and said, "We'd better say good-by now. I've got to slip away directly after lunch. You'd better not see me go, in case you're asked."

"I suppose I'd better not," said Ronald gloomily; and he put his hands in his pocket, and kicked at the gravel.

They gazed at one another awkwardly: then he said, "Well, you're the jolliest kid I ever came across."

"I didn't know boys could be as nice as you," said Pollyooly with conviction.

There was another rather awkward silence; then with a determined, almost heroic, air Ronald stepped forward, put his arms clumsily around Pollyooly's shoulders, and kissed her full on the lips.

They both gasped and flushed; then with one accord they turned and walked quickly towards the house, saying nothing, looking shamefaced.

On the top of the steps, Pollyooly paused and said softly, "Good-by, Ronnie."

"Good-by, old girl," said Ronald.

As soon as lunch was over Pollyooly went quietly out into the garden and into one of the long shrubberies. Once screened by it she ran swiftly along it to the home wood. Then she stopped running and walked quickly. As she came out of the gate at the end of it the clock over the stables of the Court struck half-past two; and thirty yards down the road a motor car was coming slowly up to the gate.

The Honorable John Ruffin, masked by his goggles, was driving it; and on the seat beside him sat the Lump. At the sight of him Pollyooly gave a little cry, rushed down the road, sprang into the car, caught him up and kissed and hugged him furiously.

The Honorable John Ruffin smiled, and said, "I thought you'd be dying to see him. But take him into the tonneau and put on the goggles and the cloak on the seat. Cover up all your hair with the hood."

Pollyooly made haste to transfer herself and the Lump to the tonneau and slip on the hooded cloak and the goggles.

"You'll do. No one will recognize us," said the Honorable John Ruffin; and he set the car going.

For a long time Pollyooly was busy with the gurgling Lump, assuring herself that he had not suffered for lack of her care, trying to ascertain the degree of his joy at being restored to her. At last she settled back in the tonneau with a sigh of content: she had earned the twenty pounds.

Twenty miles from Ricksborough Court the Honorable John Ruffin bade her come and sit by him on the front seat, and let the car go slow while he questioned her about her success at the Court.

When he heard that Ronald had discovered her secret, he frowned, and said, "That's a pity. It means that they'll find out the trick we played on them very much sooner than they would have done."

"Oh, no. Ronald will never tell," said Pollyooly firmly.

Since a month later, after he had gone back to Eton, the newspapers were still talking about the inexplicable disappearance of the Duke of Osterley's little daughter, it was plain that Pollyooly was right.

Pollyooly had just taken the Honorable John Ruffin's tea into his sitting-room and retired to the attic above it, where she dwelt with that red-headed cherub, her little brother the Lump, when there came a knocking on the outer door of the chambers. She went down and opened it; and there on the landing stood a dazzling vision—a lady in a confection of scarlet and yellow, in which only a beauty as brilliant as hers could dare to deck itself. So fine, however, was her coloring, so dark her eyes and hair, that even those primary colors seemed hardly to give them their full value.

She smiled at the sight of Pollyooly's angel face, in its frame of red hair, and said in a delightful, eager voice, "You're the little girl Mr. Hilary Vance calls 'Pollyooly, the queen of the slum fairies.' You sat to him for the pictures of those fairy stories in the Blue Magazine."

"Yes, ma'am," said Pollyooly, dropping a courtesy like the well-mannered child she was.

"Well, I'm the Esmeralda, the dancer," said the vision, her face all alight with eagerness. "I want a little girl to dance with me in a fairy dance at the Varolium. I've tried all the dancing schools in London without finding the right one: then I saw the pictures of you in the Blue Magazine, and I was sure that you were just what I wanted if you could dance a little. I went to Mr. Vance; and he gave me your address, and told me that you could dance, because the first time he saw you, you were dancing to a barrel organ."

"Yes, ma'am," said Pollyooly.

"Well, it isn't much dancing I want from you, only just to move about lightly and be a fairy in the picture; and I'll pay you a pound a week," said the Esmeralda, with the same eager quickness.

"A pound a week?" said Pollyooly; and her blue eyes opened very wide, shining.

"Yes; and I'll find your dresses—and send you home every night after the show. But perhaps I'd better arrange it with your father and mother."

"I haven't got any father and mother," said Pollyooly.

"Then will you come and dance with me?" said the Esmeralda.

"I must ask Mr. Ruffin. I'm his housekeeper. He is in; I'll go and ask him now," said Pollyooly.

The Esmeralda smiled a little mischievously. "I'll come with you. You can introduce me; and I'll arrange it with him," she said confidently, as if she had never had reason to doubt her power of persuading men.

They went to the sitting-room door; Pollyooly knocked at it, opened it, ushered in the Esmeralda, followed her in, and said: "Please, sir, this is the Esmeralda. And may I go on the stage?"

From the unruffled coolness with which the Honorable John Ruffin rose from his easy chair and bowed to the Esmeralda, the sudden irruption of dazzling visions in scarlet and yellow might have been the commonest occurrence in his daily round.

He drew forward a chair for her, saying: "I'm charmed to make your acquaintance. Like the rest of London, I'm looking forward with the wildest impatience to seeing you dance."

Murmuring a polite hope that he would not be disappointed, the Esmeralda sat down. He turned to Pollyooly and said: "Did my horrified ears deceive me? Or did I hear you ask leave to go on the stage?"

"Yes, please, sir," said Pollyooly firmly.

He shook his head sadly, and said in a reproachful tone: "Oh, Pollyooly, Pollyooly! This must be the result of your country up-bringing. No London child of twelve would dream of going on the stage. This is the pernicious effect of life at Muttle-Deeping."

"But it's a pound a week, sir," said Pollyooly, plucking at her frock. "And you told me to make all the money I could and save all I could, because your creditors might win the victory and consign you to the deepest dungeon in Hollaway Castle, and the Lump and I would be turned out. That was what you said, sir."

"A pound a week! That's a very different matter," said the Honorable John Ruffin with a great air of relief. "As long as it's the honest desire for hard cash and no silly glamor of the footlights, I see no harm in the stage. But has a London manager offered you an engagement? A gleam of intelligence in a London Manager—amazing. It's incredible! Pollyooly, you're pulling the leg of a man old enough to be your uncle."

"It's me," said the Esmeralda quickly with a dazzling smile. "I want her to go on the stage."

"Ah, that explains the intelligence," said the Honorable John Ruffin politely.

"I want her to dance with me—in a fairy pastoral. It will be quite easy," said the Esmeralda.

"Well, if the hours are not such as to spoil her complexion, which would be a crime, and ruin her constitution, which would be a pity, she must certainly accept your offer. A pound a week is certainly Fortune; and who knows but what it may lead to Fame," said the Honorable John Ruffin with enthusiasm.

"I will look after her," said the Esmeralda.

"I'm sure you will," said the Honorable John Ruffin. "Bring some fresh tea, please, Pollyooly; and we will discuss the details. Be sure you cut the bread-and-butter very thin."

THERE IS A PLACE IN FORT WAYNE, WHERE YOU MAY GO WIT FULL ASSURANCE OF BEING POSITIVELY CURED AND ENTIRELY RID OF THE DISEASES FROM WHICH YOU SUFFER. THOSE DISEASES AND WEAKNESSES THAT UNDERMINE YOUR STRENTH, HEALTH AND VIGOR, SO ESSENTIAL TO YOUR SUCCESS, HAPPINESS AND WELL-BEING. THAT PLACE IS THE OFFICE OF THE MODERN SPECIALIST,

DR. E. W. MORELAND

Consultation and Advice Free.

GET CURED

Weakness and Disease were formerly looked upon as very unfortunate conditions, because patients did not know where to go for relief, or because medical science had discovered no positive cure for them, but in this age of medical advancement there are few diseases but that will yield to science and skilled treatment such as I use. Since the age of SPECIALISM people readily know where to go for relief. If they remain uncured it is their own fault, and others have but little sympathy for them. In fact, there is an unpleasant aura about those diseased which causes people to shun them. There is an attraction about robust health that draws those of your circle of acquaintances to you. There is a joy about health that must be experienced in order to be appreciated. The satisfaction of being able to look every man and woman in the eye, knowing that your affliction is gone, is worth more than can be valued in dollars to one who has been afflicted. To get cured is not only a duty that you owe yourself, but one you owe your family, your country, your neighbors and your God. I have made a spe cial study of the Nervous System, and have perfected methods that will cure PELVIC DISEASES. I will give you a searching and thorough examination, thus determining the exact location and nature of the disease. I have the most complete and thoroughly equipped office in the city for the cureof Pelvic Diseases. In fact, I am the only exclusive PELVIC SPECIALIST in the city, limiting my practice to the treatment and cure of but FIFTEEN DISEASES, Viz: Rupture, Piles, Fistula, Prostatitis, Cystitis, Obstructions, Knotty Veins or Varicocele, Hydrocysts, Blood Poison, Nervous Debility, Atrophy, Kidney, Acquired and Specific Diseases.

THE TREATMENT I have used in curing many others who had the diseases and symptoms mentioned below is exactly what I will give you and that YOU ARE SURE TO BE CURED BY TAKING.

VARICOCELE-ENLARGEMENTS—My treatment cure will cause the enlargement or knotty-like condition or varicocle, to at once disappear. I do it without cutting and all symptoms are soon gone.

NERVOUS DEBILITY, FUNCTIONAL DECLINE—If you are weak, nervous, have lost vitality, back pains, no strength or ambition, I can quickly relieve you of all such symptoms of weakness and make you strong.

KIDNEY COMPLAINTS—The majority of these cases I treat are benefited so fast they are cured before they expect it. They don't come back for treatment after I dismiss them—it's a permanent cure.

BLOOD POISON—Treatment for only a short time cures rash, swellings, sore mouth and throat, pains, aches, removes every sign and symptom—it stays cured, and I can assure you the treatment is not ordinary mercury and potash, like other specialists give you.

RUPTURE CURED—The majority of cases cured in a few treatments without cutting, pain or risk. Ninety per cent of Surgical Operations are failures. My records show a perfect cure in 95 per cent of cases treated. I know you will think it impossible to cure ruptures as I do. Let me prove it by what I have done. It will be the happiest time of your life when you return home cured.

FISTUULA, PILES—I can cure you so quickly and easily that you will be surprised. I will give you just the result and cure you are looking for without a surgical operation. INHERITED, ACQUIRED AND SPECIFIC DISEASES—Scientifically and quickly cured. No bad results following. If you have been disappointed elsewhere, let me cure you to stay cured.

OBSTRUCTIONS—My cure dissolves obstructions completely, allays all inflammation, cleanses and heals the bladder and kidneys when irritated or congested and restores health and soundness to all parts affected by the disease.

INVESTIGATE my ability, distinctive methods and reasonable charges before placing your case elsewhere.

HOURS—9 to 12 A. M., 1 to 5 P. M.

AUTOMOBILE SECTION

ONLY ON MOTOR TRACKS.

Lozier Company Will Race No More on Dirt or Horse Tracks.

The Lozier Motor company has announced that Lozier cars will, in the future, take no part in races or contests on dirt tracks or horse tracks of any character, unless they have been re-built and re-modeled for the express purpose of automobile racing and shall have received the approval of the proper A. A. A. committee. The fatal accident to Balse at the Hawthorne track in Chicago recently, and the accident to Strang in the Wisconsin races, adds but additional instances to prove that racing on these tracks is dangerous and entails a useless sacrifice of human lives. It gives one more opportunity to sensation-mongers to decry all form of automobile racing as dangerous, when as a matter of fact, racing on automobile speedways and properly guarded roads can be made as safe as any other sport or form of athletic contest in which it is generally admitted a certain element of risk or danger exists.

The Lozier company has been a consistent advocate of racing with stock cars and has announced the intention of continuing competitions in principal events of the year, but in the future, an effort will be made to limit these contests to specially built speedways or tracks remodeled for automobile racing or on properly guarded road racing circuits.

The Indianapolis speedway is an example of what may be done to make automobile racing tracks comparatively free from danger. When this track was first built the opening meet resulted in a number of deplorable accidents, through cars breaking steering gears or bursting tires; the cars running over the embankment, overturning and in one case running into a crowd of spectators. The track had not been fully completed, but after this meet a cement wall three feet in height was placed around the outside of the track, and although cars have since repeatedly crashed into this wall, in not one instance of this kind has a driver received a fatal or serious injury as a result. In the last 500-mile race and during the practice preceding it, numerous accidents occurred. At three different times cars crashed into this wall and were badly wrecked, but drivers and mechanics escaped with small injury. The most serious accidents to Greiner's mechanic and to Joe Horan, were the result of one precaution which had not been taken, and that consisted in leaving the inside of the track, in places, of soft dirt. The cars leaving the track were stopped so suddenly as to overturn them. It is understood that this defect is being remedied and the chances of fatal accidents in a race between experienced drivers and with properly limited fields will be reduced to a very small possibility.

DISCRIMINATION NECESSARY.

Purchasers of Cars Must Learn to Buy From Established Lines.

With the gradual settling down of the industry it is becoming increasingly evident how necessary it is for purchasers of cars to take account of the reputation and responsibility of those who make them, whether the purchasers be dealers who buy cars only to sell them, or individuals who buy them for personal use.

Without regard to those who have failed, the number of manufacturers who have "silently folded their tens" after having "felt out the market" and found it not all that fancy pictured is very much greater than is generally supposed to be the case, and is known only to those whose business requires that they periodically make the rounds of the trade. That this silent shrinkage will increase rather than diminish is in the nature of prevailing conditions, which at the same time serve more securely to fortify the positions of the makers who have thoroughly established themselves and whose reputations and resources are so plain that all may see.

Those manufacturers who seek to "feel out the market" or who incline to get rich too quickly cause a peculiar situation which is not appreciated until they have folded their tents. Their cars may have given satisfaction, but it is when something goes wrong with them and necessary repairs and replacements no longer are available that purchasers first realize the real meaning of using unknown or little known products of poorly established manufacturers. It is then that "bargains" prove expensive and are repented of and that teeth are gnashed—then, or possibly when it is desired to sell the used cars, at which time it is necessary to put the proverbial "horse sale" to blush.

This phase of the situation often is little realized even by dealers who should know better, many of whom, seduced by the glitter of a discount, have built up a fair local trade in a comparatively unknown product only to be left in the lurch when the manufacturer retires, voluntarily, or otherwise, and who then are put to the necessity of practically beginning all over again.

Reputation always has been a real valuable asset and, if anything, its value in the automobile industry never was greater than at present.

EVERITT SIX CYLINDER.

New Line Includes Big Motor Developing Forty-eight Horse Power.

The 1912 Everitt line will include one six cylinder and two four cylinder chasses on which will be mounted fore-doored touring and roadster bodies rating at forty-eight, thirty-six and thirty horse power, respectively. In the new Everitt chrome nickel steel will be used throughout.

The Everitt manufacture is by automatic tools, jigs nad fixtures, every part of the car being made in the one factory. In the past year the cost of manufacture has been reduced to an extremely low figure. This in turn has made possible the use of better and more costly materials.

The new Everitt six makes use of a block type cylinder casting in which the six cylinders, intake and exhaust pipes and the upper half of the crank case are cast all in one piece. The new six has a wheel base of 126½ inches, tires 36x4 inches, demountable rims and a new cellular radiator of the honeycombed type. Dual ignition is provided with magneto and batteries and complete equipment with top, windshield and speedometer is included at the list price. A positive self-starter of a compressed air type operated by a push button on the dash is furnished.

The new four cylinder thirty-six horsepower Everitt has a 115-inch wheelbase with 34x4-inch tires, demountable rims, cellular radiator and dual ignition. Complete equipment of top, windshield and speedometer is also included at the list price. Like the new Everitt six this car is provided with a self-starter.

Among the changes in the 1912 models are a larger crank shaft, a system of enclosed valves, a larger pump and intake and exhaust water connections with a larger and roomier body and heavier frame of deep channel section and an enclosed system of brakes protected against mud and dust. Brake pulls have also been simplified and the springs have been carefully developed.

The carureter has also been the subject of much experiment and careful testing in order that the final design adopted may give more complete vaporization, particularly at low speeds, and assist in the easier starting of the engine. The push rods have been increased in size both as to length and diameter and fibre seats of improved resign are inserted.

STARTS ON EASTERN TOUR.

J. M. Carmer and Family on Long Trip—Using Auburn Demonstrator.

Early Thursday morning J. M. Carmer, of the Fort Wayne-Auburn Automobile company, accompanied by his wife, son and two daughters, started on a long eastern automobile tour. Mr. Carmer was accompanied as far as Columbus, Ohio, by his New York partner, Charles Ladue, who has been spending a few days in the city.

The touring party are making a trip in the big gray fore-door Auburn demonstrator that caused so much comment in the city last fall. The car is a 1911 model, and has been driven over 8,000 miles on the same set of tires that it left the factory with.

Mr. Carmer and family intend visiting New York, Atlantic City, Washington and several New England points and on the return part of the journey they expect to travel several hundred miles in Canada.

HUNTINGTON TO SEE RACES.

The citizens of Huntington will have an opportunity to see real automobile races in their city before the summer is over if all present plans materialize. The Garford, E. M. F., Amplex and Overland companies are making preparations to send stock cars to that city to race on the half-mile track. Eight or ten entries have been assured and if the little oval can be worked into good shape the spectators will have a chance to see a fifty-mile run.

TO DOUBLE SIZE OF PLANT.

Through Mr. Brosius, the local Ford dealer, it has been learned that the Ford Motor company, of Detroit, intend enlarging their plant to twice its present capacity. The new building will be practically a duplicate of the present factory, 865x120 feet, and will be ready for occupancy December 1. The addition will cost $500,000.

MASON PETERS WOULD RETURN.

The Sad Story of South America and a Press Agent.

(New York Review.)

Mason Peters, who went to South America some months ago with Tex Rickard, and did not annex himself to a return ticket, has been heard from. A letter, bearing his signature and other signs of genuineness, has been received in New York, relating some of Mr. Mason's experiences in the land of earthquakes, insurrections, yellow fever and other frivolities. From this missive, it appears that Mr. Peters was appointed press agent of one of the far southern governments at a salary so wondrous that he spent the first day pinching himself to be sure he was awake, and the next trying to go to sleep.

On the third day a revolution broke out, overthrew the government and projected Mr. Peters back into private life. Mr. Rickard, meanwhile, had headed his own course toward San Francisco, with the purpose of pulling off a prize fight between Jack Johnson and some other pugilist he has in mind, guaranteeing the champion $50,000 for his end of the purse. Under these circumstances, Mr. Peters would be pleased to meet an estimable capitalist to travel due north and desiring the companionship of an affable, sociable and entertaining young gentleman.

LIGHTNING KILLS FEW.

In 1906 lightning killed only 169 people in this whole country. One's chances of death by lightning are less than two in a million. The chance of death from liver, kidney or stomach trouble is vastly greater, but not if Electric Bitters be used, as Robert Madsen, of West Burlington, la., proved. Four doctors gave him up after eight months of suffering from virulent liver trouble and yellow jaundice. He was then completely cured by Electric Bitters. They're the best stomach, liver, nerve and kidney remedy and blood purifier on earth. Only 50c at all druggists.

THE COMMON SENSE OF DIET.

A horse will starve on straw alone, however much it receives; for though it can digest and obtain nutriment from the straw, it uses up more energy in so doing than the digested material can supply, so that the animal is a loser on balance, writes A. D. Hall, in Harper's Weekly. With human dietaries we never reach anything like this level, but many of the unconcentrated vegetable foods do leave a comparatively small proportion of their energy available for work, because so much is used up in driving the machinery of digestion. It would be possible to construct a diet which would contain all the protein and supply all the heat usually considered necessary for existence, but which would keep a man entirely occupied in the work of digestion without leaving any margin for external activities. Now, putting out of consideration such extremes, we see that civilized life in its higher forms does demand sudden and extreme outputs of energy—not necessarily of great duration; the call is for speed and intensity more than for quantity of work, and this would seem to necessitate the more concentrated forms of diet which consume a minimum of their value in their digestion. A farm horse at plow will get along on indifferent hay and a little maize, but for the race horse you want the heaviest of oats and the choicest of alfalfa forage.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY REMEDY

Is particularly recommended for chronic cases of kidney and bladder trouble. It tends to adjust and control the kidney and bladder action and is healing, strengthening and bracing. L. McConnell, 117 Catherna St., Elmira, N. Y., says: "Two bottles did the work most effectively, and proved to me beyond doubt it is the most reliable kidney medicine I had ever taken and it shall always have my endorsement." Dreier Drug Co.

THE PEERLESS

White Enmmel Refrigerators

The "PEERLESS" WHITE ENAMEL is applied upon galvanized steel in several coats, and baked at varying degrees of temperature for each coating. This produces a flinty, glossed surface, which is absolutely odorless, thoroughly sanitary, and will not peel nor flake.

Notwithstanding the fact that the quality and character of the "Peerless" White Enamel make it a distinctive grade, and of greater intrinsic value than any other enamel yet produced, we, nevertheless, offer it in competition and at comparative prices.

OATS GOES UP THREE CENTS

Advances on the Local Market from 37 to 40 Cents a Bushel.

A BIG MARKET TODAY

The only change to be noted in local grain prices today is in regard to oats, which has advanced from 37c, the quotations Friday, to 40 cents, being due to the light supply. The impression is it will go higher. Wheat remains at 83 cents. Corn is selling on the street at 55 and 60 cents.

The Barr street market this morning was the largest of the year. Between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock there were 170 farmers and hucksters in the stalls at the two market houses and along the east side of the street from the city hall to Main street and at that hour the crowd of buyers was immense, being so great at times that it was difficult for one to make his way through the market houses. Everybody had their market baskets and everybody left for their homes with their baskets well filled.

Everything imaginable in the way of country produce was offered for sale from the stalls and wagons. The prices were about the same as have been quoted for the last week. Vegetables were piled up high. There were yet lost of cherries and berries. Green apples have made their appearance, little cholera-morbus things bringing 25 and 35 cents a peck.

The wholesale market, north of Main on Barr, was not a big one, however. Not more than a dozen farmer's wagons were there with grain, etc.

THE MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.

Chicago, Ill., July 1.—Hot wether northwest today gave the wheat market backbone. The fact that deliveries here this morning were unexpectedly small had also a bullish effect. The total was only 13,000 bushels whereas 2,000,000 bushels or more seemed to be the popular estimate before hand. Moreover, Liverpool sent word of a decrease in local stocks and of less favorbale reports from Russia and from India. The opening was a shade to ⅜c higher than last night. Sept. started at 89⅞c to 90⅛c, reacted to 89⅝c and then rose to 89⅞@90c.

With stocks decreasing and with the crop near the danger line from heat, sentiment in the corn crowd kept bullish. Sept. opened ⅜@½c to ⅝@¾c up at 61⅝c to 61⅞c despite the large deliveries. One reason was that all the grain sent round went into strong hands. The price touched 61½ but rallied quickly to 61½@61⅝c.

Oats met a good deal of realizing and though sympathizing with other grain showed less strength. Sept. started ⅛@¼c to ⅜@½c higher at 44½@44¾c and receded to 44⅜c.

Profit taking in July pork eased off that option, but otherwise the market ruled firm with hogs. First sales were 10c off to 7½c up with Sept. delivery $15.52½ for pork, $8.40 for lard, and $8.50 to $8.55 for ribs.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, July 1.—Strength of the Erie issues which were influenced by the report that the road was to be affiliated with the Canadian Pacific was the feature of the stock market at the opening today. Erie first and second preferred gained a point each and the common a substantial fraction. Canadian Pacific remained virtually stationary. A heavy buying movement in Western Maryland advanced that stock 2½. American Beet Sugar gained a point and American Car and Foundry ⅝. United States Steel was not affected by the government report and the stock gained a small fraction. A few of the less active issues were weak. Great Northern Ore certificates lost 1⅜. International Steam and Pump 1¼ and Toledo, St. Louis and Western preferred ¾.

The general market made only a feeble response to a rise in United States Steel to 79¼ and prices shaded off afterwards with Atchison and Southern Pacific leading the decline. The attendance of traders on the floor was small.

The market closed steady. The slight advances effected in the early buying movement were lost when the list adopted a more definite downward tendency. Atchison and Southern Pacific were especially heavy and were forced to about a half a point below yesterday's closing. The rest of the list steadied around last night's level.

AT LAST, JUSTICE IS DONE.

"The Fool Who Rocks the Boat" Received Merited Punishment.

(New York World.)

The man that rocked the boat got what he deserved recently at Pine Brook, near Caldwell, N. J. Robert Goloski was his name. He and John Maguire, of Paterson, and Helen Devine and Mary Schmidt, of Newark, went boating on the Passaic river.

When the party was in the middle of the stream Goloski, a giant in size and strength, rocked the boat. Maguire protested. Goloski rocked the craft all the harder. The two young women screamed. Then Goloski, laughing loud, rocked the boat until water came in.

Maguire's coolness averted disaster. He held the scared women in their places until Goloski grew tired of his dangerous sport and then rowed to the nearest landing, where he helped the women ashore.

As Goloski, still chuckling, stepped toward the bow of the boat Maguire, a small chap, dealt him a fist blow in the face that knocked the big fellow into the water.

Two anglers in another skiff fished Goloski out with a boathook. He yelled to a policeman and had Maguire arrested on a charge of assault. When Justice of the Peace Isaac Baldwin had heard the evidence he dismissed the charge.

"Any man who will rock a boat with women in it needs a lesson," said the justice to Goloski, "and if Mr. Maguire or these women will make a complaint against you I will commit you to jail."

The others said they thought Goloski had got his punishment. With a swollen face and half-closed eye he hurried out of court.

Lebnyer, in France, trying to solve the problem of how to make photographs permanent and free from all change, has resorted to the plan of "firing" them in a furnace upon enameled stone. It is found that the best stone for the purpose is the basalt found in prisms in the extinct volcanic district of central France. This rock, which is extremely hard and fine-grained, receives the enamel without cracks. The photographic film is deposited upon the enameled surface, and, after the photograph has been made, it is fired until the image becomes unalterably incorporated in the enamel.

DON'T WORRY

Is your landlord waiting for his rent? Is your grocer waiting for his bill? Is your life insurance waiting for its premium? Is your furniture store waiting for its payments? Is some loan company pressing you for a settlement? Have you had sickness, death, perhaps with all its extra bills? If so, you have worry enough without worrying about money.

Come to us. We will loan you the cash you need in a lump sum, to do with as you please, and allow you to pay it back in small, regular payments arranged and stipulated by yourself.

WE LOAN $10. TO $300.

On furniture, pianos, automobiles, machinery, stock certificates, life insurance policies, growing crops, live stock, etc., in city or country. Security left in your possession.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

"GRIM VISAGED WAR."

"The Battle of Summit Springs" will be the chief scenic feature with Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Pawnee Bill's Far East when it exhibits in this city July 8. It was in this conflict that Col. Wm. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill), killed Tall Bull and thus turned the tide of victory for the government forces. This battle was the culminating result of a long campaign of trailing and scouting by a force of United States cavalry under command of Gen. E. A. Carr, with Buffalo Bill as chief of scouts. Under Tall Bull a large band of renegade Indians—Arapahoes, Sioux and Cheyennes—had been committing depredations throughout Western Nebraska and Eastern Colorado for several years. It was on July 11, 1869, that Buffalo Bill discovered the "dog soldiers," as the Indians were called, in camp at Summit Springs, near the western border of Nebraska. He guided the government forces to the scene and engineered a surprise attack which resulted in the utter rout of the redskins and the practical extermination of Tall Bull's followers. In reproducing the battle of Summit Springs with the Wild West and Far East historic facts will be followed with careful detail. The death of Tall Bull will be re-enacted, with Buffalo Bill playing his original role. Gen. E. A. Carr will be impersonated and other prominent officials of the United States cavalry detachment will also be shown by representation. Other scenic features of the big exhibition will be reproductions of the incidents which marked the conquest of the western wilds. They will be given with historic accuracy and will show the dangers and hardships incident to the discovery and settlement of the fertile western fields. There will also be a congress of roughriders with the exhibition, and an entertainment of exhilarating interest is assured. Col. Cody's coming visit will be his last personal appearance in the saddle in this city.

JUNE WEATHER IN FORT WAYNE

GIVES MUCH DATA

Local Forecaster W. S. Palmer today issued the first complete monthly weather summary from the Fort Wayne station of the United States weather bureau. It covers the weather conditions for the month of June just passed. The local station was opened May 20, and June is therefore the first complete month for which local observations have been taken.

This is the weather bureau's regular monthly meterological summary (known technically as form 1030,) which Forecaster Palmer announces will be gladly supplied each month to all who can make use of it if a request is made to the local station.

What the Summary Shows.

SAVED HIS WIFE'S LIFE.

"My wife would have been in her grave today," writes D. H. Brown, of Muscadine, Ala., "if it had not been for Dr. King's New Discovery. She was down in her bed, not able to get up without help. She had a severe bronchial trouble and a dreadful cough. I got her a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, and she soon began to mend, and was well in a short time." Infallible for coughs and colds, it's the most reliable remedy on earth for desperate lung trouble, hemorrhages, la-grippe, asthma, hay fever, croup and whooping cough. 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. WANT PUBLIC PARK.

Lagrange, Ind., July 1.—Some of the progressive and up-to-date citizens of this place are agitating the idea of the town buying the Ruick field of six or eight acres, where the baseball diamond now is, and maintaining it for a public recreation park and playground. Not only that, but the dredge will soon come floating down Fly creek to that point and the plan further is to have a basin or bayou scooped out there large enough and deep enough to make a suitable swimming pool for the boys of the community.

A PEEK INTO HIS POCKET

TAFT DISPUTES WORD OF HINES

White House Statement is That He Had No Hand in Lorimer Triumph.

PRESIDENT IN DENIAL

Washington, D. C., July 1.—Regarding the testimony of Edward Hines in the Lorimer inquiry that Senator Aldrich told him to notify Springfield the president was anxious that Lorimer should be elected to the senate, the following statement was authorized today by the white house:

"The fact with reference to the president's relation to Senator Lorimer's election is this:

"That during the tariff fight gentlemen came to President Taft and expressed their interest in passing the tariff bill and said that it had been suggested from Illinois that it would be wise for the president to express an opinion in favor of the election of Mr. Lorimer.

Refused to Authorize Message.

"He did not know Mr. Lorimer well, although he knew that he was an influential member of congress, but he did know Senator Hopkins. He knew very little about Illinois politics, but expressed a desire there should be two republican senators from Illinois. When asked to put that in the form of a telegram urging the election of Mr. Lorimer, he declined to do so.

"The statement by Mr. Hines that the president was anxious for and was urging the election of Mr. Lorimer is wholly unfounded."

The president is therefore standing upon this official statement, which originally was made when Mr. Hines testified before the Helm committee, and will not add anything to it or take away anything from it.

Statement Made Also in Letter.

Attention was called at the white house also to an extract from a letter written by President Taft shortly after Lorimer's election in which the executive said:

"The reports, rumors or statements that I consciously lent any weight of the administration to the election of Lorimer are wholly untrue."

HOW TO ADVERTISE.

The following article, "How to Advertise," was published in the June number of District Agents' Monthly, published by the Curtice Publishing Co.:

Does it pay a district agent to advertise his agency and the Saturday Evening Post and the Ladies' Home Journal? That depends—largely on the district agent and the kind of advertising he does and how he follows up the "ads." You might just as well ask, Does it Pay to Put Money in a Bank? or Does it Pay to Invest Money in Business? It does not pay if you put your money in a bank that is "shaky," and, even if the bank is solid, it won't pay you very much if you don't follow up your original deposit with other deposits. And it will not pay you to invest your money in a business that you know nothing about or that appears to be all right on the outside, but of which you are suspicious. But if the business proposition is a good one, then by all means invest your money in it.

Now, the question of a district agent advertising his Post-Journal business can be analyzed in exactly the same way. In the first place, you know that the two publications are the foremost in the world. Their respective circulations of over 1,750,000 copies weekly and over 1,500,000 copies monthly prove that. Will it, then, pay you as district agent to advertise your end of the Post-Journal proposition? Most assuredly it will not pay you to advertise if you do not put intelligent thought into your campaign and if you fail to follow up your advertisements with personal salesmanship through your sub-agents. But if you do plan your advertising and do follow it up you most assuredly will profit.

The best example of good advertising by a Post-Journal district agent that has come to our attention recently is that done by Charles A. Phelps, of Indiana.

In the first place, it is well to state that Mr. Phelps lives in a city of about 65,000 population and to explain that he has made his organization really a team. This latter statement is especially important, because it is on the team and its relation to the district agent that successful P.-J. advertising depends. Mr. Phelps and his sub-agents work together like a piece of well-oiled machinery.

Now, then, for the actual advertising: Mr. Phelps started with the Post of April 22 and used 37 inches of space in the Fort Wayne Sentinel. In that space he used the weekly Post Forecast, which is prepared in the home office and sent to every district agent. This, of course, necessitated a little editing of the "copy," for, as you know, the Forecasts are prepared for the boys, to give them a short account of each article and story, along with the tip as to whom each feature will especially appeal. Btu such changes can be made in a few minutes.

The regular charge for transient space in The Sentinel, the newspaper that Mr. Phelps used, is 50 cents per inch. But, having a contract with The Sentinel for 1,000 inches, the 37 inches cost only at the rate of 19 cents per inch, or $7.03 for the whole advertisement. Now read what Mr. Phelps says about the results:

"My sales were increased seven per cent., and five per cent. of the new business I attribute to the advertising (now mark you!). In combination with the instruction that I gave my boys to use the features of that Post issue, as pointed out in the Forecast, in their yells and selling-talk."

The following week Mr. Phelps changed the style of his advertising. He inserted paragraphs throughout the newspaper, like the following:

THE GLORY OF CLEMENTINA

EVERY FISHERMAN

will want a copy of this Week's Issue of The Saturday Evening Post. Don't forget—on sale Thursday, 5c a copy.

DR. WOODS HUTCHINSON

has a fine article in this Week's Saturday Evening Post. Be sure to read it. On sale at all news stands.

Every real estate dealer or owner of real estate will want a copy of this week's Saturday Evening Post. Page 36.

These advertisements appeared in Tuesday's and Wednesday's Sentinel, and when Mr. Phelps' boys came for their Post copies he told them about the advertisements, explained how they would arouse people's curiosity and that the thing for them, the boys, to do was to specialize on these three features—The Gloria of Clementina, the article by Dr. Woods Hutchinson and the real estate article which was written by one of the best known real estate men in the United States.

Now read what Mr. Phelps says about his sales of that issue:

"My sales exceeded all previous records, my boys' sales running over 900 and my newsdealers' sales also running over 900 copies.

"Now I am going after the 1,000-mark for the boys, and the newsdealers, too."

Yes, advertising does pay if you advertise in the Phelps way—combine your advertising with your selling, and see that your sub-agents follow up each week's advertisements.
